—By Arthur Brisbane—

A MESSAGE from Mr. J. M. Tarafa, presidente Comison Nacional Defensa Asucar de Cuba, is appreciated.

It reads "Leida sus commentarios en El Mundo hoy sobre aranceles para azucar. Significole mi sinceru y calurosa felicitacion por la defensa muy justa que hace vd de Cuba."

Mr. Babson sent the stock market down merely by saying it must go down. Stock gamblers are like children. It doesn't take much of a ghost to frighten them.

Yesterday, men that really know about stocks contradicted Mr. Babson, and stocks went up.

Mr. Babson, like the rest of us, only knows what MR. BABSON knows.

Recently he was in the middle of the Florida land boom. And perhaps that warps his vision.

If he keeps his Florida land, he'll make money, if he bought it with intelligence.

Those that have bought stocks with any intelligence will make money if they keep them.

Geneva cables that "Woodrow Wilson's League of Nations idea" has discovered that it can't prevent war, even among its members.

Sir Arthur Henderson, secretary in Britain's Labor government, suggests an agreement among seven big nations to outlaw war, banish it, END IT.

Excellent idea. Europe should stop fighting, if possible.

But good resolutions that drunkards make when sober are forgotten when they are drunk. What applies to drunkards applies to nations that have the fighting habit.

What would Mussolini, for instance, do, if somebody stepped on his toes? He answered plainly enough in the Greek incident.

Meanwhile, small bodies of British troops are fighting larger bodies of Arabs in Palestine.

The quickest way to quiet that neighborhood would be constant, persistent use of airplanes bombs and gas. Arabs respect what they don't understand.

But the British are conservative, patient, wise, moving slowly, where religious hatreds are concerned. They will kill as few as possible.

The United States, listening to common sense, will continue developing gas warfare.

Gilchrist, head of the army's chemical department, says gas is the kindest thing in war. With the right kind of gas, you could render millions unable to fight, without hurting them much. That's comforting.

But, whether or not gas is comfortable or uncomfortable for the enemy, gas warfare should be fully developed. We shall never gas anybody that doesn't come looking for serious trouble. But we should have assorted gases ready—mustard gas, tear gas, and the kind that the angel of death used on Sennacherib's army.

Russia, convinced that capitalism dreads and fears her, accuses China of refusing to be friendly, because capitalistic influences control her.

PLANE FOUND; ALL DEAD

LIGHTS WERE 'FLASHING' CALIFORNIA MAN SAYS

R. R. Section Foreman Gives a Possible Clue to Livermore Party Air Liner

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 7 (AP)—Transcontinental Air Transport headquarters here announced late today wreckage of the T. A. T. passenger plane "City of San Francisco," had been found on Mount Taylor, New Mexico, with all occupants dead.

Los Angeles, Sept. 7 (AP)—Sante Fe Railroad offices today were in possession of a report that a tri-motored plane, flashing its lights on and off," had landed in the Providence mountains, seven miles northwest of Bagdad, Cal., at 6 p. m. last Tuesday.

The report was made to the chief dispatcher at San Bernardino by James L. Shooks, a section foreman.

Shooks, who said he had been at work in the desert and had not seen a paper until late yesterday, told the dispatcher he had thought little of the circumstances until he read of the search being made for Transcontinental Air Transport's passenger liner, City of San Francisco, carrying a crew of three and five passengers, including Harris Livermore of Boston, Mass.

The plane, Shooks said, appeared to be losing altitude, and he told the dispatcher that as it passed from his sight into the Providence mountains its wing lights were "flashing on and off."

He said it appeared to land, but he could not say for sure. The sound of the motors also stopped suddenly, he said, but he was not certain whether they had ceased

Lindy Hops for Search

4 Hurt in Lynn Auto-Truck Crash

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, accompanied by his bride, took off from St. Louis to Winslow, Ariz., today to hunt for the missing transcontinental passenger plane. (I. N. R. photo.)

Typical of the terrain where Harris Livermore, Boston banker, and his seven companions of the missing plane have been lost since Tuesday last. The scene is at Walpi, Ariz., and the district is the habitation of Indians. Here it was that Lieut. Tomlinson yesterday saw four persons waving clothing and whom he mistook for the missing plane folk. Sixty-two miles away is Winslow, base of the search parties. Maj. John M. Stanley is in charge of the medical rescue unit. Scores of planes are engaged in the search. (A. P. photos.)

Maynard Canfield, Harvard '28, whose two New York brothers are now enrolled there, was courier on the plane. His father, G. F. Canfield, has offered a $5000 reward. (AP photo.)

FIREMEN SAVE VICTIM HELD IN WRECKAGE

Injured Are Taken to Hospital: the Crash Causes Much Confusion

Confusion followed a crash of motor cars in which four persons were injured at Western Ave. and Chestnut st., Lynn, today.

Three pedestrians who saw the crash, between an auto operated by John Birmingham and containing his wife, Florence, and son, Donald, and a truck operated by Thomas Traino, rushed away in different directions. Two went to widely separated telephones to call police and hospital for ambulances. The third raced to a box and sounded a fire alarm.

When firemen, police and an ambulance arrived they found Birmingham pinned in the wreckage of his car and badly cut on hands and head. Mrs. Birmingham and her son were lying, stunned, in the street. Traino was trapped in the cab of his overturned truck.

All four were taken to the hospital and after treatment sent to their homes.

Family Gathering at Library Is Ruled Out

Pawtucket, Sept. 7—Unless Mrs. Annie M. Brogan can arrange a better place than the public library for her divorced husband to visit their children, Judge Capatosto in the Superior Court today declared he would give the father custody of them.

Brogan and his daughters were subject to too many prying eyes, Brogan complained to the court.

The two girls, Annie, 13, and Gertrude, 14, were called to the stand. They said they had seen their father very few times during the last 10 years.

Judge Capotosto said it was about time the girls became acquainted with their father. He ordered the lawyers of the two, family factions to arrange some place other than the public library, before Tuesday, or the father would be given the custody.

$225,000 BALM SOUGHT BY 2

The aftermath of a raid on a Haverhill hotel in August came today in Suffolk superior court, when John F. Finnegan of Braintree brought suit against William A. McAlphine of Scituate for $200,000 for the alleged alienation of affection of his wife.

McAlphine and Mrs. Finnegan were arrested in the Haverhill hotel. In the same court today, Margaret A. Giblin of Boston brought suit for $25,000 against Evelyn M. Berry of Wakefield for alleged alienation of her husband's, Walter A. Giblin, affections.

New Record Flight From N. Y. to Boston

A new commercial airplane speed record between New York and Boston was set today. E. L. Bensen, flying a Lockheed-Vega plane, owned by August Belmont of New York, made the trip from Roosevelt Field to the airport in 72 minutes. The plane is powered by a 450-horsepower Wasp engine.

British Win Cup With 331-Mile-Hour Record

Ryde, Isle of Wight, Sept. 7 (AP)—With her aviators speeding faster than any human being had ever traveled before and setting a new world's record for the blue ribbon Schneider cup race, Great Britain today successfully defended the Schneider trophy against Italy in the tenth anniversary of its running.

Flying Officer H. R. D. Waghorn, on a submarine Rolls Royce S-6, set a new Schneider cup course record with an average speed of 328.63 miles per hour, surpassing the previous record of Lieut. Webster of Great Britain in 1927 by 47.14 miles per hour.

Flying Officer R. L. R. Atcherley, on a machine identical to Waghorn's, surpassed the world's speed record of his comrade on one of his laps and set a new one with a mark of 332.49 miles per hour, the fastest time ever made anywhere by man. He had previously made 331.16 miles per hour in one of the laps around the 50-kilometer course.

Some confusion was created after the race by the announcement that Atcherley was disqualified for the race when he failed to pass around a pylon marking one of the course points on his fourth, but a later announcement made plain that the world's record of 332.49 miles per hour would stand, because Atcherley twice made it. The first time was on his fourth lap and the second, equalling it, on his seventh lap.

The British, ace, despite his disqualification, was informed his marks of 332.49 miles an hour for the 50 kilometers stretch and 331.76 for a 100-kilometers stretch would stand officially. His course average was 325.54 miles per hour.

Italy was overwhelmed by the dashing British flier. Waghorn, Warrant Officer Tomaso Del Molin was the only one of her three entries to finish and his average was only 284.20 miles per hour over the course.

Lieut. Bano Cadringher and Lieut. Giovanni Monti, both flying Macchi 67's, were forced out of the race. They made forced landings, unhurt, while travelling at high speed.

ALLAN HOOVER FOR HARVARD

Allan Hoover, younger son of the President, will enroll at the Harvard graduate school of business administration this fall.

He was graduated from Leland-Stanford University in June.

At the close of the second semester at Leland-Stanford, young Allan was taken ill with a stomach trouble. He came east and was put under the care of a Washington specialist. Later he spent several weeks at his father's fishing retreat on the Rapidan river. He is now in perfect health.

BRIDE MAY TURN DE MAR PRO

"Well boys! Maybe I'll use them again. Maybe I won't! Perhaps my wife won't let me."

Two hours before he was to take as his bride Miss Margaret Daley of 42 North ave., Melrose, the Marathoner expressed those thoughts.

"You can't tell, maybe she will make me put my shoulder to the wheel and tend strickly to business" Clarence added, with a grin.

"Seriously, Clarence," a reporter asked, "are you going to quit the marathon game for good? What

MILLIONS LOSS IN N. ORLEANS

New Orleans, Sept. 7 (AP)—New Orleans today faced one of the most disastrous floods in its history.

Torrential rains falling almost continually through the night overtaxed the pumping system and flooded the city, in some spots as deep as six feet.

Fleets of skiffs and motorboats, manned by police, succored the marooned, paying particular attention to the removal of the sick and aged. Food supplies were carried to homes shut off by water. All traffic was suspended for hours.

The weather bureau reported the total rainfall for 24 hours ended at 8 a. m. was 10.75 inches.

Property losses were staggering, and may run into millions. Water stood shoulder deep in the orchestra section of the Sanger Theater.

The flood caught the city sleeping and rapidly rising water caused terror in many households. Families were awakened to find water in their rooms and at 2:55 a. m. W. L. Rosenbaum awakening to find the lower floor in four feet of water, fired his shotgun to arouse the neighborhood. After using all his shells, he called many families over the telephone.

Police were directed by Superintendent Ray over the telephone from his home where he was marooned. All available boats were commandeered by police.

The telephone company and police warned families in the most serious areas. Women and children were taken out of many homes.

SEARCH FOR LIVERMORE PARTY FAILS ACROSS MEXICO BORDER

FRESH CLUE IS REPORTED IN CALIFORNIA

burning or the plane merely had gone beyond his bearing.

Bagdad is a railway station of the Santa Fe, 50 miles west of Needles, Cal., and is almost directly on the regular T. A. T. route into Los Angeles.

ABOUT RIGHT TIME.

The time Shooks reported having seen the plane was approximately seven and a half hours after the City of San Francisco left Albuquerque. Albuquerque, on a straight line, is approximately 500 miles from Bagdad.

The City of San Francisco, piloted by J. B. Stowe, was said by T. A. T. officials to have carried a gasoline supply for six hours of flight at a cruising speed of 110 miles an hour. This would have placed the ship somewhere near Bagdad within the time the plane was reported seen by Shooks if Stowe for any reason had been forced to go past Winslow, his only scheduled landing port en route to Los Angeles.

RECALLS HUNT FOR WOOD.

The fact that a search was made in the vicinity of Needles Cal., Tuesday afternoon for the plane of Maj. John Wood, which crashed while racing to Cleveland, cast some doubt on the theory that what Shooks saw might have been the missing T. A T plane.

It was considered possible that he might have observed a searching party flying low, although so far as known, no tri-motored ships were engaged in the Wood search and the hunt was centered on the desert considerably north of the point he described.

It appeared likely, also that ban the T. A. T. liner been in the vicinity Tuesday night members of the Wood searching party might have seen it. The hunt for Wood, however, involved little intensive observation over the Providence mountains.

Just Another Rumor, Declare T. A. T. Officials

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 7 (INS)—Officials of the Transcontinental Air Transport Co. here today branded a report that their missing air liner might have been located near Providence Mountain, north of Bagdad, Cal., as "just another of those rumors."

Independent check of the district disclosed no one who would back the reported sighting of a passenger plane suspected of being the lost City of San Francisco.

Searchers in Old Mexico Fail to Find a Trace

Winslow, Ariz., Sept. 7 (AP)—After covering an area of 65 by 150 miles in southwestern New Mexico, and a tip of Old Mexico, where a report said the missing Transcontinental Air Transport plane had been seen, a party of El Paso newspapermen returned to Columbus, N. M., today and reported they had found no trace of the air liner.

It was because of reports that a plane had been seen Tuesday over Old Mexico, 50 miles south of Hachita, N. M., that the newspapermen made their search there today. It is 200 miles south of Grants, N. M., where the airliner is generally known to have been last seen.

The reports came from Mrs. Walter Hancock, Hachita, N. M.; Fray Peterson, a rancher, and others.

The point sought was about 50 miles south of Hachita, an almost inaccessible country.

MYSTERY IN SEARCH

One phase of the search remained unexplained when 12 planes, which took off late last night, had not returned.

T. A. T. offices here expressed surprise when told the ships had left Gallup and professed ignorance of the presence of that many planes in that locality. Winslow officials denied any T. A. T. planes had been in Gallup.

Timbered mountains, gloomy gorges and rock strewn wastes of Arizona and New Mexico failed to give up even a vestige of a clue to the lost plane. The greatest fleet of airplanes ever assembled in the United States for such an undertaking was driven numerous reports.

Cowboys, range riders of the bad lands, coal handlers from the mines of Gallup and Navajo, Zuni and Apache Indians searched the rugged terrain. Today they went out again, in augmented numbers.

Four men, seen signalling a searching plane piloted by Lieut. D. W. Tomlinson were found, upon investigation, to have been Indians waving a friendly greeting.

Another report that Mrs. George B. Raymond of Glendale, the San Francisco woman passenger, was in a Hachita (N. M.) hospital was proved groundless.

INDIANS HAMPER SEARCH

Tribal superstition which forbids Indians to touch a human body was said to be hampering the efforts of hunters afoot. They said the work of Indian runners and trackers had not come up to expectations because of the growing belief that the occupants of the lost liner would be found dead, a thought which seemed to be sapping the enthusiasm of the aborigines.

Offers of rewards—now totalling $10,000 - appeared to mean little to the Indians. They were reported soliciting wages for their services in guiding parties across the New Mexico lava beds.

Although the aerial armada searching for the sky liner had scanned about 50,000 square miles of territory in Arizona and New Mexico without finding a trace of the plane the ships were destined for work over that region.

Twenty-seven planes were at the Winslow airport and there were 20 at Kingman, Ariz., including ten naval planes. Three army planes were reported at Barstow, Cal., en route to Winslow. The whereabouts of three marine corps planes, which left San Diego yesterday, was not definitely known.

Pilot's Chum Confident Passengers Are Safe

Chicago, Sept. 7—Jesse Stowe's "buddie" is confident Stowe and his passengers on the City of San Francisco are alive.

The "buddie," Wayne C. Williams, air mail pilot for Universal air lines, applied for leave of absence to aid in the search for the man who is his sky-brother.

"Jesse Stowe dead? Rot!" declared Williams. "His father has prospected all through that country and Jesse has been with him. I know that if he had one-tenth of one per cent chance he landed his ship and passengers safely.

Assures Mrs. Livermore Plane Will Be Found

Search for the City of San Francisco will be continued until the plane is found, a representative of the T. A. T. sent from New York today promised relatives of Harris Livermore, Boston passenger on the plane.

The company's representative told Mrs. Livermore and her three children the T. A. T. would spare no expense or effort to find the ship and passengers. He said special lines had already been set up between Arizona, New Mexico and New York and that every message transmitted would be instantly relayed to the Livermore summer home at Manchester.

"Red" Jackson Hops to Join Searchers

British War Ace Is Killed in Air Crash

London, Sept. 7 (INS)—A. E. Woodbridge, famous British war ace who shot down Baron Manfred von Richthofen, Germany's premier war flier, was among three persons killed when an imperial Airways mail plane en route from London to India, crashed at Jask, Persia, today, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Karachi.

The others killed were V. G. Bell, a passenger and an airways employe named Court.

Geneva, Sept. 7—The first formal acceptance of the American project for limiting the output of manufactured drugs has been recorded.

The League of Nations received a communication from Consul Virato Figueredo-Lora, of Costa Rica, stating that his government accepted the principle of the American plan.

The project, known as the Crane plan, reached the League through the Netherlands government, to whom former Secretary of State Kellogg had forwarded the scheme submitted by C. K. Crane, of Los Angeles.

The league distributed copies to the delegates of all nations, although its advisory committee on the traffic in opium and other dangerous drugs sought to bury the proposal.

Six Months' Profit on Liquor $2,800,000

Victoria, B. C., Sept. 7 (AP)—Government officials announced today that British Columbia derived a profit of $2,806,034 from the sale of liquor during the six months ending March 31, 1929.

The profit was the largest for a like period since the government took over the sale of liquor in 1921. Total profits for the eight years was $24,587,833.

Hoover Lobby Attack Stirs Washington

Washington, Sept. 7 (INS)—President Hoover's denunciation of the shipbuilding lobby was by long odds the most vigorous public utterance he has made in his six months in the presidency.

It aroused speculation today as to whether he will follow up his attack with similar denunciation of other lobbies that are notoriously and flagrantly operating in Washington.

The Capitol has been a veritable beehive of lobbyists ever since the special session of Congress began last April. Most of them have been drawn here by the new tariff bill—there are sugar lobbyists, steel lobbyists, cement lobbyists, boot and shoe lobbyists—in short, lobbyists for everything. And all of them have a pecuniary interest" in the proceedings.

SENSATION IN WASHINGTON

The sugar lobby has been most conspicuous and numerous, with the American and Cuban producers and manufacturers hitting at each other with everything but the ring-posts.

President Hoover's threat to seek legal action against shipbuilding corporations which propagandize against naval reduction created a sensation in Washington.

While Mr. Hoover named no names, he referred to the $250,000 salary suit which William B. Shearer, a so-called naval expert, has brought against three large concerns on the ground that he represented them at the abortive Geneva naval conference and elsewhere in opposing naval disarmament. The concerns sued by Shearer were the Bethlehem Shipbuildig Corporation, the Newport News Shipbuilding Corporation, and the American Brown Boveri Corporation.

MAY TAKE LEGAL ACTION.

"This propagandist," said the President, "has organized zealous support for increased armament and has been a severe critic of all efforts of our Government to secure international agreement for the reduction of naval arms, which include activities at the Geneva conference, and opposition to the movement I have initiated in the past three months.

"Every American has the right to express his opinion and to engage in open propaganda if he wishes, but it is obviously against public interest for those who have financial interest in, or may be engaged in contracts for the construction of naval vessels, secretly to attempt to influence public opinion or public officials by propaganda in favor of larger armaments, and attempt to defeat the efforts of the Government in world limitation of such armaments."

The President said he was having the attorney-general look into the situation to see if there is not some law by which such activities may be stopped or made the basis of prosecution.

Call Senate Committee to Act on Sh arer Case

Washington, Sept. 7 (AP)—Chairman Hale today called a meeting of the Senate naval committee for Tuesday, to consider a proposal to investigate the activities of William B. Shearer at the unsuccessful naval disarmament conference at Geneva in 1927.

Brazil Trip of Hoover to Be Done in Oils

Rio de Janeiro, Sept. 7—Three of the most important scenes of the visit by President Hoover to this city are being done in oils on one canvas by Navarro da Costa, Brazilian artist, at the command of the government. This painting will be presented to President Hoover on Dec. 21, the anniversary of his landing on Brazilian soil.

The plans are still indefinite for the presentation at the White House. It may be made by Ambassador Amaral or a special mission may take the painting to Washington.

BABSON FINDS WIDE INTEREST IN STOCKS

Executive Says More People Are Following Market Than Ever Before

More people are following the stock market and other financial news in the newspapers than ever before, according to Richard Moore, executive of the Babson Statistical Organization, at a round-table conference of business and industrial leaders at Babson Park, Wellesley, today.

The conference was part of the 25th anniversary of the Babson organization, and the 16th annual national business conference held under the leadership of Roger Babson, head of the organization.

"A tremendous increase has taken place in the number of average persons who are reading closely the financial news in the papers," said Moore. "The financial houses have come into contact with the situation and as a result are catering to this great new element by clamoring for financial advertising space in the daily papers."

ON EMPLOYES OWNERSHIP

In a discussion concerning the spread of stock-ownership of industries by employes, Creighton Hill, labor expert in the Babson organization, said the organization does not favor employe stock-ownership plans, regarding them as precarious unless the investment of the worker is safeguarded.

The average worker, he said, knows nothing of the conduct of the industry of which he is a part. Great corporations like the Telephone Company, and Bethlehem Steel, he said, which sell their stock in limited amounts to employes, are in such strong financial condition that the employes' money is safeguarded.

Although the general outlook for New England is good for certain industries, according to F. Gardner Perry, director of research, it would be "absurdly optimistic" to say the outlook for the textile industry is good.

BOSTON DOING WELL

The plight of the shoe industry in New England could be greatly remedied, Hill said, with the elimination of the great variety of styles, especially in women's shoes.

Boston is holding its own commercially, according to Miss Martha Burgess, sales statistician.

Growth of other large cities in New England, such as Worcester, Springfield and Hartford, will aid Boston, the speaker said.

Chain stores now do about 16 per cent of the retail merchandising, according to Guy Brown, a Babson official. The increase in chain store is less rapid than in the past few years, he said, due to independent stores, handling about 60 per cent of retail merchandising, are "losing ground" because of the threat of the chain stores. He said both the chain store system and the independent organized independent store will live.

No collapse in instalment business is in sight, it was agreed in a discussion on consumer credit.

JEWS CRITICIZE BRITISH RULE

Jerusalem, Sept. 7—Criticism of the British Government and demands for alleviation of the situation in Palestine are contained in a joint memorandum on recent events submitted today to Sir John Chancellor, British high commissioner, by a general council of the Jewish community and other Jewish bodies.

It is charged the Government did not take proper precautions to prevent the Arab outbreak and did not use proper methods to stem the riots. The memorandum demands, among other things, the appointment of a commission to study ways establishing security of life and property in general and in Jewish settlements particularly.

Reports today indicated the situation is quiet.

HUB WARMS UP; MERCURY 85

Bostonians warmed up today when the temperature reached 85 degrees at 2 p. m. This was 18 degrees higher than yesterday at 2 o'clock.

The sudden jump was due to a rout of the east wind by southwest breezes. Showers are predicted for tonight and tomorrow, with cooler weather tomorrow.

A favorable shift in the wind dispelled the fog which, early in the day, threatened to continue its unwelcome visit of the last three days. Shipping began to move again.

Before the change for the better, however, the liner New York, from New York for Boston, was delayed an hour and a half and the Camden, from Belfast, was an hour late, as was the Yarmouth, from the Maritime provinces.

AMMONIA GAS HITS HUNDREDS

Ten employes of H. P. Hood & Sons milk plant in Colonial ave., Dorchester, were driven out, and hundreds of persons in the vicinity were inconvenienced today when ammonia fumes escaped from a broken condenser.

The police roped off Colonial and Southern aves., to keep a crowd of 500 at a safe distance, while firemen wearing gas masks went into the plant and closed a valve, which stopped the escape of the fumes.

The firemen were led to the shutoff by Ethan Newcomb, an employe of the milk company. Newcomb also wore a gas mask.

Fumes flooded the district for a quarter of a mile.

Trenton, N. J., Sept. 7 (AP)—Lawrence Maynard, who once wrote bad checks and is now in prison for burglary, is a successful author. Several of his short stories, written in his cell, have been published in magazines. Efforts are under way to obtain a parole. He has found it much easier to work than be a crook.

MAINE TO VOTE MONDAY ON POWER

Intensive Campaign Is Waged for Lifting Ban on Export of Electricity

Portland, Me., Sept. 7 (AP)—The campaign over the proposal to amend the constitution so as to permit the export of surplus hydro-electric power, now forbidden by the so-called Fernald law, drew near a close today.

The voters will decide at the special referendum Monday whether the act, which for 30 years has kept power within the state, shall stand.

Led by officials of the lower companies, Governor William Tudor Gardiner, former Governor Percival P. Baxter and others, proponents of export have waged a campaign of speech-making and circularizing that has reached from one end of the state to the other.

Opponents of the measure, although not so active on the platform, have not been idle. Former Governor Ralph O. Brewster and Dr. Ernest Gruening, Portland editor, have been the outstanding anti-export speakers.

An excise tax of 4 per cent of the revenue from exported power is provided in the new measure and supporters of the bill have assured the voters full provision is made for the recall of exported power when it can be used in the state.

Opponents maintain there is no surplus of power and that there can be none until every farm house is electrified. They say there will be no reduction in rates, and the power companies have never said definitely there would be.

Four other questions appear on the ballot. A proposal to permit the issuance of $15,000,000 additional bonds for highway and bridge construction; to increase the gasoline tax from four to five cents a gallon; methods for filling vacancies in the Governor's Council, and a $1,200,000 bond issue for a bridge across the Penobscot river near Bucksport.

GET 6 GALLONS OF MOONSHINE

Six gallons of liquor, mostly moonshine, were seized in three raids today by federal prohibition agents and Boston policemen. The places raided included a cigar store in Shawmut ave., where Henry U. Hillehans, 44, was arrested; the A. R. C. Club in Harrison ave., where Donald Gilmore was arrested, and Hotel Liberty, Washington st., for which a warrant is held charging "John Doe" with a previous sale. In the last place the liquor was seized in a guest's room.

The raiders included federal agents Francis Lovett and Patricia L. Stevens and W. J. Tobin and Boston officers, Sergts. William Mellen and William Cripps and Walter Hannebery.

Some truth in both complaints, perhaps.

In a recent cotton strike, workers lost $5,000,000 a week in wages, with loss of $1,000,000 a week in export trade, and must fight to get it back.

Arbitration is the only way. If the Labor government can find arbitrators that both sides will trust, persuade employers to play fair and union men to keep bargains, when they find they don't like them, it will render indubitable service to Great Britain, and teach this country something it needs to learn.

From the material point of view, Russia will gain by her "continuous industrial war."

There will be no stoppage of machinery, on Sunday or other days, during 360 days each year. Five other days, six in Leap years, will be devoted to patriotic, Bolshevik holidays.

Each man will have his rest time, longer than under our six-day and Sunday plan, but machinery will never stop, except for repairs.

To make machines work all the time, and to give reasonable leisure would be the ideal program. But, of course, Sunday should not be neglected—especially as a basis openly hostile to religion.

Girl to Fly 'Grandma' Bennett, 103, Sunday

Chinopee, Sept. 7 (AP)—"Grandma" Almatia Bennett announced definitely today that she had accepted an invitation to celebrate her 103rd birthday tomorrow with an airplane trip. This flight will be less extended than those that have marked her five previous birthday flights, on two of which she has flown as far as Portland, Me., and will be limited to easy reach of Springfield airport.

At the controls will be Miss Maud Irving Tait of Springfield, an experienced aviator who recently set an unofficial altitude mark for women fliers. "Grandma" Bennett's flight will follow a dinner at a Springfield hotel which will be attended by half a hundred relatives.

MAN BURIED ALIVE 42 HOURS BY WELL CAVE-IN IS RESCUED

DOCTOR FEARS HIS LEGS MAY BE PARALYZED

Miners Dig Tunnel Under "Quicksand Tomb" as Thousands Look On

Ottumwa, Ia., Sept. 7—Wilkins Priest, imprisoned for 42 hours in a cave-in well here, was released at 6:07 a. m., today.

He cried for water as he was brought on a cot to the surface of a shaft that workers had started Thursday morning.

Workers had toiled incessantly since Thursday morning when Priest was buried under rocks and sand when the curbing of the 35 foot well crumbled while he was cleaning it.

Thousands watched the rescue work.

Dr. D. L. Rater made a hasty examination at the shaft, but was unable to determine the extent of his injuries. It was feared Priest's legs were paralyzed by the pressure of the debris.

Priest stood in almost total darkness at the bottom of the 35-foot hole, his senses numbed and his body held by the relentless pressure of earth and bruised by rocks and bricks that had tumbled down upon him.

Imprisoned two days ago by the cave-in of the well which he was repairing, Priest was near rescue from his quicksand trap as dawn came today. Miners had rushed a trench to the depth of the bottom of the well, and only an eight-foot wall of earth at that hour separated them from the imprisoned man.

Attempts to reach Priest from the top of the well brought down raw showers of loosened dirt, threatening every moment to fill the crevasses between the brick about the captive and shut off the precious air supply.

14-INCH SNOW CHILLS WEST

Denver, Col., Sept. 7 (AP)—With no relief in sight and snow falling in Denver and other points in the Rocky Mountain region, the threat of winter today assumed a degree of certainty. Temperatures ranging from 24 to 39 degrees, the lowest in this region at this time of the year in four decades, were reported.

Havre, Mont., reported the temperature there was 24 degrees. At Kalispel, Mont., it was only four degrees higher; Yellowstone Park, 30; Helena, Mont., 34, and Denver 39.

The earliest snow in 38 years at Lander, Wyo., disrupted power and communication lines and demoralized traffic.

Fourteen inches of snow was reported in the Fox Park district in southern Wyoming. Albany, Wyo., in the same region, was under a foot of snow.

MRS. PANTAGES PROFANE

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 7—The trial of Mrs. Lois Pantages on the charge of second degree murder was in its second day today, a special session being ordered as Monday is Admission Day, a legal holiday in this state.

Two witnesses for the state testified.

A brief address to the jury was made on the opening day by Prosecutor Costello. He described the alleged zigzag course of Mrs. Pantages' car down the street, and of the woman "shouting profanities" at persons who tried to halt her.

William Rokumoto, son of the victim of the motor crash, was the first witness. He testified that he was a student, and that he last saw his father alive in the hospital where he died.

Asst. County Autopsy Surgeon Dr. Frank Webb was the second witness. He testified that Rokumoto died of shock resulting from a fractured pelvis. He found numerous cuts and abrasions on the man's body, a blood clot under the brain, internal injuries and a distinct hemorrhage near the spinal column.

Judges Assailed in Beauty Crown Award

Baltimore, Sept. 7 (AP)—Dissension has entered into the crowning of Miss America of 1929 at Baltimore's national beauty pageant. The decision of the judges in awarding the title to Miss Lillian Andrus, 21-year-old brunette, representing Buckeye Lake, O., was followed by a storm of protests from the sponsors of several other of the contestants.

The sponsors charged the winner was a professional beauty and entered in the contest at the last minute from an amusement park in which the backers of the contest were interested. They claimed no Miss America had been chosen and announced they would hold a contest of their own in the ballroom of a Baltimore hotel today.

The sponsors were supported in their claim by Earl Carroll, New York theatrical producer, who withdrew from the list of judges at the last minute. Carroll was quoted as saying "No Miss America was picked. It wasn't a representative showing. What the judges did was pick the prettiest girl among the contestants."

Twenty-two of the 47 girls entered in the contest were said to have expressed their willingness to enter the new contest.

The pageant last night was conducted by local interests in an amusement park and was designed to take the place of the discontinued Atlantic City beauty pageant.

Truant Officer May Take Hand in Strike

North Smithfield, R. I., Sept. 7—Even a warning that the truant officer would be called on to bring 25 striking children into the classroom has failed to change the attitude of their parents in the Primrose school dispute.

The pupils are remaining away from school as a protest against the ousting of Mrs. Martha Harris, 55-year-old "school marm," and the appointment of Miss Margaret L. Ewen, 21-year-old normal school graduate, to fill the vacancy.

Only one pupil, Barbara Fort, six, has been attending classes, and with both sides standing pat no settlement of the dispute is in sight.

Samuel Farron, member of the committee, said that he was loath to order the truant officer to round up the children and arrest their parents, but he was afraid such action would have to be taken if the "strike" was not broken soon.

Atty. James T. Greene of Woonsocket, engaged by the parents to represent them in the event of court action, said he had done nothing so far except to confer with the parents.

JILTS MUTE; HE HAS HER JAILED

Norwalk, Ct., Sept. 7 (AP)—Miss Helen Lockwood, outboard motor boat racer and daughter of Ira C. Lockwood, president of the Norwalk Fur Co., was attached "in person" today and lodged in a police cell as a result of the filing of a breach of promise suit for $4000 against her by Peter Shay, 25, a mute, of this city.

Shay charges the girl with making "fraudulent promises" to marry him, these promises inducing him to give her a $400 diamond ring and clothing and accessories costing $1600, which she has refused to return. He asked attachment of her property, but since she has none, a constable "attached" her on the fraud allegation. Her attorneys are trying to get her released on a habeas corpus writ.

You'd Be a Genius—If You Weren't So Lazy

New Haven, Sept. 7—If it were not for laziness, humans of civilized countries would be galaxy of intellectual wizards.

Man's opportunity for achievement is largely restricted by his own obstinacy or his inclination to take things too easily.

These theories were advanced by psychiatrists at the International Congress of Psychology at Yale University.

It was brought out that humans strive in the period of intelligence usually at the age of 14. From then on mental development depends upon education and environment.

The debate on mental development was precipitated by Professor A. R. Gilliland, of Northwestern University, Chicago. He said:

"The age of mental maturity varies greatly with different human beings. Some are slower than others; some exhibit little or no intelligence."

Necessity for training the child in its earliest year of understanding was impressed by Professor Florence L. Goodenough, of the University of Minnesota.

A glimpse into expert analysis of reasons for backwardness among college students was given by Professor Frank Freeman of Cornell University.

Aside from lack of interest, poor habits of study and "loafing," he offered as reasons for college failure, extra-curricular competitions, work for self-support, independent reading and social activities.

The backward individual, it was brought out, chiefly has himself to blame for indolent habits and the tendency to take short cuts to every problem of life.

MISSING MOTHER AND THREE CHILDREN GIVEN HOME BY STRANGER

SHELTERED BY WEST NEWTON FAMILY

Woman Determined the State Should Not Take Tots Away From Her

Safe in the West Newton home which sheltered her and her three children while police searched for them all night, Mrs. Mildred Nickerson denied today she had threatened to drown herself and the children.

The telephone c ll she made to the Chardon st. home, yesterday, she said, was merely to the effect she would kill the children rather than have them become state wards.

Mrs. James Blue, who met the poverty-stricken woman in a downtown Boston store, declared she had never seen Mrs. Nickerson before. The tired and worn look on the mother's face and the half-starved appearance of the children, clinging to their mother's skirts, moved Mrs. Blue to invite them to share her home on River st., West Newton, Mrs. Blue has five children of her own.

Meanwhile, officials of the Chardon st. home, fearing Mrs. Nickerson might carry out her inferred threat, started a search for her.

When James Blue read today's papers and learned the story, his notified police, telling them the missing woman and her three children were not in the Charles river, but safe and warm at his home.

ELOPERS' PLANE ATTACHED BY BOY'S FATHER

Rich Manufacturer Seeks the $150 Son Paid for Hop From Lowell

An aftermath of parental opposition to the airplane elopement last June of Catherine Joan Bagshaw, 18-year-old student in a fashionable private school in Lowell, and Richard Brook, son of a wealthy Toronto, Can., wool manufacturer, developed today when the boy's father attached the Lowell airplane used in the elopement of the young couple.

The father of Brook in attaching the airplane for $150, seeks to recover the fare paid by the young couple on the ground that Brook was a minor and unable legally to make a contract. The plane was hired from Oliver E. Perren and Joseph Gagnon, operators of commercial planes, at the Lowell Airport.

Arrangements were made to release the plane by furnishing a bond.

The elopement was the result of a school romance, the girl being a student at the Rogers Hall School for Girls and Young Brook was attending the Lowell Textile Institute in preparation for a career in his father's business.

Shortly before the elopement, Miss Bagshaw had played the part of Juliet in a production by her class of Romeo and Juliet.

On the elopement flight the girl became ill and the pilot had to land in Worcester, at which point the couple boarded a train for Albany, where they were married.

Five charges were leveled against Pepper by the control commission. Principal of these was that he failed to come to Moscow upon summons of the Third International but remained in New York "provoking a faction of the majority of the Communist party of America against the Third International."

It was said he failed to fulfill instructions of the executive committee to proceed to Mexico, that he carried on other factional work within the American Communist party and then denied having done so.

POSTAL RATES NOT GOING UP

Washington, Sept. 4 (AP)—Postmaster-General Brown said today that the department was not contemplating recommendations to Congress calling for an increase in first class postal rates, until it had definite evidence that the handling of first-class mail was contributing to the annually growing deficit of the department.

The only analysis of the handling first-class mail which the department possesses, shows that such mail is one of the few sources of profit in the department.

There is a suspicion in the mind of the postmaster general, however, that the foundation of this analysis is faulty and that a new cost accounting system now being worked out will show that the government does not make a profit on first class mail.

7 FIRES SET IN OLD HOTEL

Norwalk, Conn., Sept. 7 (AP)—Seven fires, all attributed by police to incendiaries, broke out simultaneously today in the Royal James Hotel, once one of the best known hostelries on the Boston Post road.

The hotel, in the heart of the business section, is vacant, and was recently purchased by the Till Rose Corp. of New York, which intends to raze it to erect a business building.

Joseph Banningosa, storekeeper, who discovered the fires, awakened the watchman, Spencer Hoyt. The blazes were quickly extinguished by firemen. The arson theory arises out of the finding by police and firemen of an open kitchen window, foot tracks across the floor, charred remnants of paper, cloth and candles.

Spring Lake, N. J., Sept. 7 (AP)—Calvin Coolidge, recently appointed a director of the New York Life Insurance Company, was a guest at a dinner given by the "$400,000 club" of the organization at the Monmouth Hotel.

The former President accepted the invitation on the condition he would not be called upon to speak.

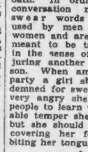
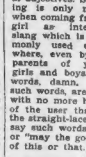
Does swearing by a girl, even in temper, hurt her reputation?

JOHN T. LESLIE, Pleasant st., Winthrop—Occasional swearing by girls does no harm to their reputations any more than it does to a man's reputation when he expresses his feelings with a good round oath. In ordinary conversation many swear words are used by men and women and are not meant to be taken in the sense of injuring another person. When among friends in a party a girl should not be condemned for swearing. If a girl is very angry she should not allow people to learn what an ungovernable temper she has by swearing, but she should control herself by covering her feelings by simply biting her tongue.

GERALD E. TRAVIS, West Newton st., South End—I have no objection to a girl who swears, unless it is done in public places. In a circle of her own companions a good, respectable girl is often heard swearing, and she is thought none the less of for so doing. Cuss words by women or men often prove better than dictionary words in expressing definite meaning when announced by the voice. Why I know one of the most refined women in the world who continually uses profanity in her home, and she is held in the highest esteem by all who know her. When a girl is really angry I know of nothing she can do that is better than to swear to let her hearers understand just how she feels at the time.





MISS ALICE C. SPRAGUE, Harvard st., Cambridge—A girl does not mean anything bad when she swears. It is only another way she has of making known her thoughts than by using more conventional adjectives. Swearing is only meant when coming from a girl as intensive slang which is commonly used everywhere, even by the parents of young girls and boys. The words, damn, hell, heavens and such words, are used by most girls with no more harm to reputations of the user than when others of the straight-laced variety of women say such words as "drat," "hades" or "may the good Lord" take heed of this or that.

MISS CATHERINE HOWELL, First st., Medford—Swearing is so common now that little notice is taken of a girl when she is heard using swear words. I think girls have always sworn, for generations. To express satisfaction a girl finds a swear word when she can not think of another word appropriate to express her feelings. She means no harm by using words not approved by the church as a general thing. The everyday words used, called swears, should not hurt a girl's reputation. When a girl limits her slang and does not go too far in showing her temper by using expressions slightly profane she does not deserve to lose her reputation.

Hub Police Teletype System Extended

Cambridge, Quincy and Brookline soon are to be hooked up with the Boston police department teletype system.

The teletype, an automatic typewriter which simultaneously records messages in several places, will enable the two outlying cities and one town to be in constant touch with Boston police bulletins at all times. Local headquarters now sends information to the 21 stations of the department within a few minutes after the happening of fires, crime, accidents or thefts.

As soon as the system is established in the three Greater Boston communities other cities and towns will be added to the hook-up until it finally becomes state wide in its scope.

SHIP AGROUND AT GLOUCESTER

The freighter Bermingdale, bound for Boston, was grounded on the ledges at Brice's Cove, inside Gloucester Harbor, early today. The Dolliver's Neck base of the United States Coast Guard and the Gloucester Humane Society sent aid to her.

North Shore and Newport Weddings Attract Society

Margaret Hitchcock Sims and Elizabeth Willard Moulton Brides Today

ONE OF THE MOST BRILliant and important weddings of the season was that of Miss Elizabeth Willard Moulton and Richard Hubbard at 1 o'clock today in Christ Church, Hamilton. The beauty of the bride, one of the most popular girls in Boston society, was admirably brought out by the filmy folds of rare old family lace, which shimmered over her gown of ivory satin as she moved slowly down the dim church aisle on the arm of her father, John B. Moulton. The impressive marriage service was read by Rev. W. F. A. Stride, the rector, before a capacity audience of the elect of the North Shore set. The color motif was green and white, carried out in the gowns of the bridal party and the church decorations. Mrs. Gordon Abbott, Jr., of West Manchester was matron of honor and the other attendants, lovely in pale green chiffon frocks and matching felt hats, were Miss Helen Moseley, Miss Hope Hubbard, Miss Evelyn Royce, Miss Rachel Jackson, Miss Edith Wolcott, Miss Peggy Belmont of Westbury, L. I., Mrs. William C. Cox and Mrs. Francis L. Higginson, 3d. Mr. Moulton gave his daughter in marriage.

JOSHUA C. HUBBARD, JR. was his brother's best man and the usher squad included Henry Rogerson of Boston, Gordon Abbott, Jr., Henry S. Fessenden, of Magnolia; Frederick Dumaine, Jr., of Weston, Francis L. Higginson, 3d, of Manchester; William C. Cox, of Cohasset; John Bishop and Benjamin Crowninshield, of Boston. Following the wedding there was a very large reception at Brookfield Farm, the country estate of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Moulton, of Beacon st. Almost the entire North Shore colony attended, with notable guests from out of town. The bride is a member of the Junior League and the Vincent Club and has recently returned from a trip abroad. Mr. Hubbard is a son of Dr. and Mrs. Joshua C. Hubbard of Bay State rd.

ANOTHER IMPORTANT SOciety bride today was Miss Margaret Hitchcock Sims, daughter of Rear Admiral William S. Sims and Mrs. Sims, and Robert H. Hopkins at Newport, R. I. Many Boston friends attended this wedding, at which the Rev. Stanley C. Hughes officiates. Miss Sims wore a princess style conventional satin gown with the lace veil worn by her mother and grandmother and carried a bouquet of valley lilies. Her sister, Miss Adelaide Sims, gowned in blue chiffon, was her maid of honor. Her other attendants were Miss Elizabeth Shepley, a cousin, of St. Louis, Miss Emma Louise Davis of Santa Monica, Calif., and Miss Elizabeth W. Johnson of Newport and Miss Ann H. Sims, another sister. The bridesmaids were burnt orange chiffon with brown velvet hats and shoes and carried bouquets of dahlias. Brooks Potter of Boston was Mr. Hopkins' best man. A large reception was held at the Sims summer home, Catherine st., Newport, following the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Hopkins are to reside at 30 Pinckney st., Boston, after Oct. 15.

INDICATIONS NOW POINT to a capacity audience for the elaborate dinner dance cabaret to be staged next Friday evening at Del Monte's in Magnolia. Numerous dinner parties are being planned for the occasion and it is not unlikely that the R S V P sign will be in evidence when the performance actually begins. Those who have already reserved places at festive boards include Mrs. William H. Coolidge, Mrs. Robert H. Bradley and Mrs. Everett Morss for ten guests each, Mrs. Frederick Ayer, Mrs. F. L. Madden, Mrs. Hugh Ward, Mrs. Ralph Cook, Mrs. George Warren and Mrs. Wright Martin for eight guests each. Mrs. Harland Seabury, Mrs. Augustus Gourdon, Mrs. Gratton Smith, Mrs. Robert Ervin, Mrs. Jeoffrey Smith, Mrs. John Mill, Mrs. Samuel S. Stevens and Mrs. Frederick Bullard will be hostesses to parties of six, and Mrs. William De Ford Beal and Mrs. Harcourt Amory will each entertain four guests. The Beverly Hospital will be benefited.

LUNCHEON AND DINNER parties, large and small, feature the last week of the summer social activities for the majority of the North Shore colony. By this time next week hundreds of summer homes will be closed and their occupants departing for winter residences. Society takes pleasure in the little informal gatherings among friends at the beach, golf and yacht clubs and the coming week will therefore be especially delightful. Mrs. Frank Seabury had several of her friends in for such a dinner party last evening at her home at Beverly Farms. Mrs. Alanson Daniels will be hostess at a large luncheon at her home, Old Farm, Wenham, on Monday, and several matrons have chosen next Tuesday for luncheon parties. Among these is Mrs. James Jackson who is giving a luncheon for several friends Tuesday. Mrs. Sherman Flint also entertains that day. Mrs. Robert S. Bradley will be hostess on Friday at both luncheon and dinner parties, with Pinehurst and Del Monte's the scenes.

Flag Champions View Art Treasures

By FLOYD E. WILLIAMSON
Special Cable.

Florence, Italy, Sept. 7—The American Flag champions, winners in the contest conducted by the United States Flag Association and the Hearst newspapers, took time off from the round of official receptions and entertainments to drink in the wonders and beauty of Italian art.

In the local galleries and museums they beheld with genuine awe and delight the paintings of Michelangelo, the sublimity of Correggio's Madonna and the Holy Family in Egypt and the priceless art treasures collected by the Medici family in the centuries gone by. Although the youthful American travelers have had more than two months of intensive roaming about in Hawaii, Japan, China, the Philippines, Ceylon and Egypt, their eagerness and enthusiasm are still unabated. Their chaperone, Mrs. Gregory, at times becomes fearful that her juvenile charges are becoming wearied, but on days when sightseeing is on the program, she finds them first on the scene, keenly awaiting the start of the trips.

POSTED IN HISTORY

Piquant Mary McGonigal, the girl champion from Troy, N. Y., expressed the general thought of the young travelers, when she said:

"We're simply in heaven, viewing these wonders and art treasures in this land where history has been made for so many centuries.

Mary is but 15 years of age, but already she knows more history than many teachers. Occasionally she corrects the guides or others who make errors in dates or other details. Pretty Alma Groves of Byronsville, Ga., is no less interested in sightseeing, but she also has a weakness for shops and styles in the various countries through which the party has passed. She has had no little difficulty to date in keeping from spending her entire allowance, which was a part of the award which went to her as a champion.

Merle Clarke of Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., appears chiefly interested in the habits of the people in the strange lands which he has visited and living conditions in the various countries. His patriotism constantly increases as he goes from country to country. His trip has convinced him, he is glad to relate, that there isn't any place on the globe like his own America.

Robert Sullivan of Syracuse, N. Y., was the recipient of a most unusual honor tendered him by the Paulist Fathers while he was in Rome. While being entertained at breakfast with the other members of his group, he was presented with a tiny piece of a bone from the body of St Theresa. Only once before has this honor been accorded any individual. Robert is literally almost bursting with pride and is guarding his treasure closely as he carries it toward America. The fragment of bone is beautifully mounted in a gold case with a glass covering.

The Lawrence J. Flaherty Legion Post of East Boston presented St. Catherine's Holy Name Society tug-of-war team of Charlestown with a silver loving cup. Michael Horrigan, Thomas Thornton, Martin Joyce, Patrick Holland and Charles McNamara were members of the winning tug-of-war team from St. Catherine's Holy Name Society.

CURTISS WILL DISCONTINUE AIR LINE

By GEORGE W. HAMBLIN

The daily schedule of Curtiss Flying Service from Boston to Hyannis, Martha's Vineyard and Nantucket, in operation since last spring, will be discontinued Monday morning upon the arrival at the local airport of the Ford trimotor, piloted by Ralph T. Wickford.

Through all the months of service, the schedule was followed closely.

No report of the number of passengers carried on the line is available at this time.

We had a very pleasant visit from Bob McCurdy, mechanic for the Bellanca Aircraft Corp. of New Castle, Del. Bob was formerly connected with the old Boston Airport Corp. and was chief mechanic of the Stinson-Detroiter used by "Wick" on the Cape route, also from Bob Nagle test pilot for the Bellanca factory. Bob lives in Brookline, and came up to say hello to the gang.

Work has been started on the removal of the two National Guard hangars to the new locations at the west end of the field. The foundation work is underway. It is understood that the old wooden hanger erected by Fred Ames will be on its way to the discard in the near future.

We are in receipt of a note from M. L. Perry, U. S. Navy Recruiting Station, asking whether we would like the press releases sent from the Navy Department. Send them along, we'll be glad to receive them.

Well, the secret is out.

After many days of questioning, Eddie Edson has divulged the purpose of the five "barber poles" being erected at the west side of the port.

Eddie said that a rubber net is to be stretched between the poles to catch the student fliers who "over-shoot" the field in landing.

This will be another big help to embryo pilots. Combine the rubber net with Eddie O'Toole's invention of four years ago—that of a portable landing field, and we will be all set for any kind of a landing. Eddie devised a scheme whereby a student leveling off for a landing at fifty-feet altitude, would have the airport shoved right up to meet him by means of a big lever.

The second day of inactivity due to the fog was devoted to seeing how many seagulls could be caught by the boys. The gulls sit on the ground when the fog gets thick, and walk to where they have to go. Some of the birds came over from Winthrop, and when last seen were testing the long, weary miles, disappearing around the corner of Wood Island.

If everything is O. K. Hazen "Beano" Bean, of the traffic department of Curtiss, will embark on his first cross-country solo flight in a Pledgling. "Beano" lives in Plymouth, N. H., and will attempt to get there by himself.

"The White House official social functions are almost as much a part of the life of official Washington as a session of Congress or a term of the supreme court. It would make great confusion in all White House relations unless the rules of precedence were observed. If this were not done, the most ambitious and intruding would seize the place of honor, or it would be bestowed by favor. In both cases all official position would be ignored."

BOSTON DAY by DAY

By FRED TOYE

THAT STATELY neighbor of the University Club, the new Y. W. C. A., has fitted itself into the busy life currents of Boston's upper Park Square district with all the ease of an old shoe. The modern 14-story building on the corner of Clarendon and Stewart sts. is a far cry from the first two rooms opened in Chauncy st. just after the close of the Civil War.

BOSTON'S Y. W. C. A. is the parent organization of all the units which have since sprung up throughout the United States in the past 53 years. This, the first Young Women's Christian Association in America, had its humble beginnings in 1866. It has grown as a result of the "willingness of women to assume the responsibility for womankind," to paraphrase the thought of the founders. Membership in the Boston Y.W.C.A. is voluntary, and is open to all women and girls without distinction.

SHORTLY AFTER the close of the Crimean War this women's movement had its start in England. The first house was opened for the sheltering of girls in 1858. Those enrolled at that time included "Two Matrons of Immigrant Ships, Two Foreigners, One Lady in Waiting, One Young Person in Training for Schoolmistresses, Two Schoolmistresses and 21 Governesses."

EARLY MEMBERS took upon themselves the responsibility to "seek out young women of the operative class, aid them in procuring employment and in obtaining suitable boarding places, establish Bible and prayer meetings for religious exercises at places convenient for them. . . ." Boston's organization took for one of its first objects, "The temporal, moral and religious welfare of women and children dependent on their own exertions for support."

DURING the World War, the Y. W. C. A. assumed large responsibilities for girls and women in this country and abroad, undertaking certain types of welfare work at the request of the government. Hostess houses, industrial service and recreation activities on a large scale taxed to the limit the resources and experience of the Association.

THE BACK BAY building is in two units. One comprises the housing section, with lobby features, public cafeteria, tea room and elevators, like any first-class hotel. The other section is devoted to association activities, and includes a large public auditorium with stage and balcony, a modern pool, 75 by 25 feet, and 3½ to 8½ feet in depth; library, board rooms, executive offices, class rooms, information desk, gymnasium, clubrooms, recreation rooms, calling corners and social room.

THE SWIMMING POOL is one of the most modern in the east. Instructors are in attendance day and evening, and private or class lessons may be had for any girl or woman. Children of 8 years and upwards are given instruction. Diving, racing, Life Saving and Red Cross work are taught by experts. The water is filtered and maintained at a steady, moderate temperature.

PROFESSORS and instructors from Wellesley, Boston University and various other colleges, dramatic schools and music conservatories, conduct special classes on a wide variety of subjects from art appreciation to weight normalizing. Many of these classes are open free of charge to members. Others call for an attendance fee averaging 35 cents.

SUBJECTS covered in the course of the fall and winter season at the "Y. W." include world travel, art of conversation, popular plays, modern novels, current topics, poetry, art in life, interior decoration, music lovers' hour, glee club, banjo and mandolin, investment, women in business, business letters, English language, German, Spanish, French, self expression, stagecraft, little theater, manners, personal correspondence, poise, the out-of-doors, bridge, dress, good looks, personality, Old Testament, leadership training, astronomy, psychology of personality, marriage, child study, children's clothes, needlecraft, handwrought jewelry, arts and crafts, home decorating, millinery, dressmaking, cookery.

STIMSON COURT NOTE IS GIVEN

Geneva, Sept. 7 (AP)—A note from Col. Henry L. Stimson, United States Secretary of State, to the League of Nations has paved the way for the league's approval of the protocol of Elihu Root and Sir Cecil Hurst, which will permit American adhesion to the world court of international justice.

The note was delivered through the American legation at Berne and simply stated that Col. Stimson would submit the protocol, drawn early last spring in Geneva, to President Hoover for signature. It was explained it then would have to be ratified by the United States Senate.

Premier Waldemaras of Lithuania addressed the assembly today, complaining the league had not progressed as it should and did not display too much promise.

All the great achievements since the war, he said—mentioning the Locarno and Kellogg-Briand pacts—have been outside the league.

The resolution of Arthur Henderson, British foreign minister, designed to bring the league covenant and the Kellogg pact into closer harmony, he said, was similar to a resolution he introduced last year, but which was shelved.

Discussion has been aroused by inclusion of a representative of the Irish Free State in invitations to a luncheon Monday at which Premier Briand of France will go into further detail on his plans for a "United States of Europe."

The suggestion has been heard that neither Great Britain nor Ireland will be included in the confederation, neither being mainland states. In the Premier's plans the status of both seemed obscure.

Springfield Willing to Aid River Project

Springfield, Sept. 7—Mayor Fordis C. Parker has ified Maj. F. S. Skinner, chief engineer of the New England District War Department Engineers, that the city of Springfield would in all probability be willing to expend $100,000 in providing central public terminals for Connecticut river navigation.

The War Department has been endeavoring to obtain a proposition from the city as to the extent of local co-operation in the event the Government should deepen and widen the channel of the river along the Windsor flats.

BOTTOM FALLS OUT OF SHIP; 6 CAST INTO SEA

With a tale of the bottom of their fishing schooner having fallen out from under their feet, 18 miles from land, the shipwrecked crew of the Edith H. Cooney of Gloucester arrived in Boston today on the liner Yarmouth, from Yarmouth, N. S.

This was the second shipwrecked crew of fishermen to land in Boston in three days.

The men included Capt. Waldo Carrigan, Ernest Diggins, Gus Terrio, Joseph Cusick, James Cavanaugh and Hector MacDougall, all of Gloucester.

According to Capt. Carrigan the bottom of the schooner in which they were after swordfish actually fell out shortly after midnight after leaking for several days.

"I swear the bottom just dropped out of that boat," said the captain. "We rowed 18 miles to Truro to save our skins.

"All but the watch were turned in when shortly after midnight the boat began to act up. The watch called us and I saw that the schooner was doomed. Two dories were put over the side and none too soon as the sea was licking the gun'wales before we were off. The schooner, of 26 tons gross, had been leaking several days. It all happened very quickly."

MRS. COOLIDGE GREETS PUPIL

Richards attended the Clarke School for the Deaf at Northampton when Mrs. Coolidge was a member of the teaching staff.

During the meeting of Mrs. Coolidge and Richards, a short conversation in the lip and tongue language was carried on. Richards lives with his wife and two children on Lawn ave., Quincy.

20 CAPE DEATH IN SKID CRASH

Mashpee, Sept. 7—Sylvester Antone, 26, of Falmouth, died at the Cape Cod Hospital, Hyannis, today, the second victim of an automobile accident here. His companion and driver, Antone Sylvia, 38, of Teaticket, also received fatal injuries when their automobile skidded through a fence.

Antone Sylvia, 60, widower, a mason, of Sandwich rd., Falmouth, is dead. The driver of the car, Antone Sylvester of Teaticket, is at the Cape Cod Hospital at Hyannis in critical condition from a fractured jaw, a fractured collar bone and a compound fracture of the left arm. The other injured passenger, Julia Stone of Jostling Park rd., Falmouth, had 17 stitches taken for cuts on his head.

Rose's seven-year-old son, Julie, Jr., escaped injury.

Police say that Sylvia attempted to pass another automobile going down hill and jammed on his brakes when he sighted another car approaching from the opposite direction.

N. Beverly Man Hit by Car, Badly Hurt

Pupil of Mrs. Coolidge

William Richards, electrician, greeted by the former President's wife at launching of the cruiser U. S. S. Northampton in Quincy. He attended Clarke School for the Deaf at Northampton when Mrs. Coolidge was a member of the teaching staff. Mrs. Coolidge conversed briefly with Richards in the lip and tongue language.

Clubwomen Strive to Aid N. E. Council

New England clubwomen have resumed fall activities.

With the return of the delegates to the New England conference of State Federations of Women Clubs delegates to their home towns from Watch Hill, R. I., the message of a "concrete New England" was taken back for clubwomen throughout the six states.

That clubwomen can greatly assist the New England Council, adding the feminine viewpoint to the men's, was agreed upon at the conference. But while the women are not planning to push their way into the New England Council's "bigger and better" programs, they feel that before long the men will want their help.

The New England Conference of clubwomen, patterned along lines similar to the New England Council, will next year be headed by Mrs. H. Omeron Coolidge of Rutland, Vt., a distant relative of Calvin Coolidge.

Massachusetts will be represented by Mrs. Edwin L. Pride of Somerville, who was elected vice-chairman of the conference which will be held next year at Bridgeport or New Haven.

A test case on the removal of the objectionable billboards, the practical protest of which each delegate was asked to sign a pledge as well as take pledges for their clubs to sign, is now pending in the Massachusetts courts, Mrs. Stewart explained.

New England is gaining rapidly in the success of this protest, speakers revealed.

But though the case has been pending for three years, Mrs. Stewart said the Supreme Court soon would hand down its decision.

The Maine delegate said there are 5000 billboards along the Pine Tree highways, but this is not a large number for the size of the state.

With the closing of the conference and the resumption of the fall club activities, Mrs. Azel A. Pack, Massachusetts president, will move to Boston.

After October 1 she will be housed at the Women's Republican Club and from there she will direct the clubs of the Common wealth.

Anagrams—Try the New Craze

By ANNE GRAMME

There are just two kinds of smartness and "Anagrambles" is both of them.

For "Anagrambles" combines the smartness of fashion with the smartness that comes only with brains, and the result is a pull more potent than that of any word game.

Here is a game fad that has swept the country over night. Everywhere, everybody, every time, it's "Anagrambles."

If you're not already one of the army of enthusiasts who are rooting for this new favorite, you will be if you look over today's puzzlers in another column of this page.

Since I started the fad in the Boston American a short time ago I've been loaded with mail from the fans.

After you solve today's Anagrambles, put these in your pipe and smoke them. They have been sent in by fans.

Lena A. Healy, 71 Beacon st., Somerville, asks you to solve these: Change Priest with "D"; "Repair" with "P"; "Marbles" with "C"; "Clear" with "M"; "Other" with "S."

We can't publish all of the Anagrambles which Jeanne Knella, 116 Devon st., Roxbury, sent us, so we will give you a few of them today to work on. Here they are: Change "Simple" with "I"; "Single" with "J"; "Linnets" with "E"; "Silk" with "E."

Bess E Goldstein, 489 Beach st., Revere, another Anagramble fan, sends us these to work out: Change "Reap" with "S"; "Spear" with "T"; "Repast" with "L"; "Plaster with "M."

Send your Anagrambles to Miss Anne Gramme, Boston Events, American, P. O. Box 155, Boston.

THE game sensation that has swept America. The rules are simple. You are given, for instance, the word "tear" to unscramble with the letter "h." The Anagramble is "heart." Similarly, to unscramble the word "link" with "s" the Anagramble is "slink."

Remember, you cannot make an Anagramble with a plural—"links" would be wrong. You have to change the complete meaning of the word—"slink" is therefore correct. Nor can you make a different tense of word. For instance, to unscramble "read" with "s" you cannot make it "reads."

You must change the complete meaning. The Anagramble therefore, is "dears." Now try your hand at these Anagrambles:

(1) EAGLE—Unscramble it with an L
(2) CREDITOR—Unscramble it with an S.
(3) OTTER—Unscramble it with an A.
(4) WASTING—Unscramble it with a T.
(5) TAPER—Unscramble it with an E.

WAGGONER'S FRAUD WAS TO SAVE FRIENDS

Denver, Colo., Sept. 7 (AP)—Although still confused by a maze of information regarding the possible wherabouts and financial transactions of C. D. Waggoner, president of the Bank of Telluride at Telluride, Colo., authorities today held the theory he took desperate measures to save his friends, depositors in the bank, from financial loss.

Waggoner is being sought in connection with manipulations which placed $500,000 belonging to six Denver banks to his credit in a New York banking institution.

The officers based their theory on a telegram to C. W. Downtain, cashier of the Bank of Telluride, which the bank president's wife said she sent for him yesterday from Wray, Colo.

The message in code was received by Downtain and said:

"I had this money sent you for the depositors. See that they get it before somebody starts something and do it confidentially. You have enough for everybody."

Downtain said he did not receive the money referred to in the telegram.

State bank officials here strengthened the authorities' theory of Waggoner's motives by pointing out he apparently did not seek to obtain any of the money for himself even though he could have obtained it in cash.

FINDS DRY LAW ENFORCEMENT 'IMPROVING'

Washington, Sept. 7 (INS)—State and municipal co-operation in enforcement of the prohibition law has become a real factor in checking activities of the bootleggers, Commissioner J. M. Doran declared today after returning from a transcontinental trip.

Doran visited a number of important cities, conferring with State and municipal officials. He said they showed a disposition to co-operate with the federal Government by suppressing speakeasies and roadhouses and by prosecuting ordinary bootleggers in the State and city courts.

"The country of course is not bone dry, but gratifying progress is being made," Doran said. "Conditions certainly are improving. The consumption of bootleg whiskey is declining in many centers. Good co-operation is being given by the managements of the better hotels, who frown on the use of intoxicating liquors on their premises."

The commissioner had under study reports on the dry situation in New Jersey, where a further shakeup in the administrator's office is impending. Lugo Pickett, a brother of Deets Pickett, prohibition leader, who was assistant administrator, and Chief Inspector Abraham Williams, were demoted and transferred to other posts.

DOUKHOBORS IN FIERCE BATTLE WITH POLICE

Nelson, B. C., Sept. 7 (AP)—A band of Doukhobors, numbering 230 men, women and children, was encamped near here today after a battle in the streets of the town with officers and police.

The Doukhobors are a religious sect of Russian origin, whose efforts to hold nude processions have culminated in frequent clashes with the police. Some of the sect are now in jail here awaiting sentence for their demonstrations.

A line of Doukhobor marchers entered the town from their encampment, and had advanced nearly to the center of the city when they were halted by a barricade of trucks and automobiles across the street.

They said they were on their way to jail to join their fellows, and threatened to storm it if they were not permitted to proceed.

A pitched battle ensued, in the course of which one woman Doukhobor had a leg broken and a number of others suffered minor injuries. The fighting continued for an hour before police, firemen and citizens drove the invaders out of the city.

A large number of Sons of Freedom, self-styled outcasts from the main body of the Doukhobors were tried here for holding a nude parade a week ago.

At Kamsack, Sask., 200 members of the sect engaged in a battle with 18 Royal Canadian Mounted Police when they attempted to enter the town on their way to Nelson. They were dispersed when the police charged upon them with clubs.

Girls Seek Advice on Age Limit for Spanking

Editor Boston American:

Will you let your readers advise us? My mother believes in spanking for us girls, ages 17 and 18, and feels that we are too big to be taken over either her knee or father's, as we frequently are now.

Tuesday night we were out a little later than usual and on coming in were made to go to our rooms and after preparing ourselves (by undressing) we were each given 50 spankings over that it was not comfortable to sit down for a few hours.

Do other girls get this humiliating treatment? If so, we might feel better about our getting it. We are both in high school and are big for our ages. We do not know of any of our friends who are spanked and doubt if any girls our ages are. Please tell us. H. J. B.

State Butcher Shops Beat Australian Beef Barons

Editor Boston American:

The state butcher shops at Queensland, Australia, are a big success. They have fought the beef barons over there effectively. They have been established since 1915 and in the last two years meat prices have been reduced 40-per cent.

The state butcher shops necessitated state cattle stations to prevent cornering by the beef barons. During the three years ending June 1928, almost 4,000,000 starving sheep were moved to satisfactory pasturages and over 175,000 tons of fodder were railroaded: all at specially reduced rates.

This brought down the price of meat. To let these sheep starve would have raised the prices. This shows that state control of meat is not a failure and could be adopted in United States and reduce prices of meats. E. H. G.

Who Are the Greatest Persons in America?

Editor Boston American:

"Who are the greatest persons in America today?" This question was put by a teacher to a number of young people attending a summer school in New Hampshire. I have in mind a few, but would like to hear from others on this topic. Only young people should answer, as the question is a test one for young men and young girls. E. Y. L.

Sees Talkies Teaching Correct Pronunciation

Editor Boston American:

In trials with the articulate cinema, it has been found that the Yankee twang is not as clear as the New York accent. The cinema in this respect is educating people to sound their vowels and consonants correctly.

It is no wonder that Smith College makes compulsory a complete course in English pronunciation. Few people in Boston sound the "N" in government, although the proportion of speakers at the State House, who do not realize this in their speeches at hearings, is large.

HIGH SCHOOL BOYS and GIRLS

Here Is Your Opportunity to Write for a Big Newspaper and Earn Good Money for It

Read How You Can Win These Prizes Which Will Be Awarded Weekly for Fourteen Weeks

First Award Each Week $15
Second Award Each Week $10
10 Additional Awards Each Week
Pair of Orchestra Seats to Boston Theatres

Young America's OWN WEEKLY Editorial Page

Edited Exclusively by High School Boys and Girls of Metropolitan Boston

Here is a golden opportunity for every boy and girl of high school age to engage in one of the highest forms of competition—and be paid handsomely for it.

Any high school student of average ability has an opportunity to win one of the many prizes offered during the 14 weeks of this unique educational competition.

Your teacher and your parents will encourage you to take advantage of this opportunity. There are no elaborate rules, conditions or obstacles to this competition. All you have to do is to set down in 150 to 200 words your own ideas on any of the suggested topics or on any other topic which you may select. You write this kind of paper very often in your regular school course. Themes or compositions which you write in your own English class may be exactly the kind of paper that will win you one of these prizes.

You do not have to be an English "shark" to have your editorial selected as a prize winner and printed in the Boston Evening American. Your editorial will be rated for its good ideas and its clarity rather than merely for its literary technique. The suggested topics for the first week are:

1.—The importance of dress for high school boys and girls.

2.—The tour of the Graf Zeppelin.

3.—Why should boys and girls read newspaper editorials?

4.—The relationship of teacher and pupil. (Should the teacher hobnob or hold himself aloof?)

These are merely suggested topics. You may write on one of them if you choose, or you may select any other topic of current interest that you feel you would like to write about and make that your subject.

Rules of Competition

1. This competition is open to any boy or girl of high school age, 12 to 18, whether or not attending any high school.
2. Editorials may be written on the topics suggested or on any other topics of current interest.
3. Editorials should be between 150 and 200 words in length and must be written or typed on one side of the paper only. Name and address of sender must appear at top of each page.
4. Do not write on religious or political subjects.
5. Editorials will be judged on the basis of understanding of the subject, clarity and force of expression, and adherence to the rules of grammar and construction.
6. The suggested subjects for the first week are:
   1.—The importance of dress for high school boys and girls.
   2.—The tour of the Graf Zeppelin.

ALL IS GAME TO HIM WHO SHOOTS

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

THERE is one branch in big game gunning for which there is never a closed season. It is always within the law to take pot shot at Hollywood; not even dum-dum bullets are barred. By reason of all this the principal home port of the frisking film finds itself living up to a scarlet reputation.

* * *

WHILE we thoroughly enjoyed Richard Bennett's spirited performance in "Jarnegan," there were many moments during the passage of the story when the question of fidelity to fact naturally presented itself. We have no doubt of Mr. Bennett's sincerity. He unquestionably believes all that Jim Tully wrote into the novel from which "Jarnegan" has been fabricated. Mr. Bennett has a way of preaching while he acts, and upon other occasions has been found upon the virtuous side of social problems demanding vigorous treatment. Usually he is able to make what we call good theater while pointing a solemn moral.

Nicholas Young

IN "Jarnegan" Mr. Bennett embarks upon the benevolent mission of showing up Hollywood, painting it in crimson colors. It becomes no abiding place for the innocent or the pure. To accept "Jarnegan" as first hand, authentic news of studio extravagances, one also becomes convinced that filmdom's head policeman, Will H. Hays, must be somewhere asleep on his beat. But we are inclined to take "Jarnegan" more as red hot entertainment than a lesson in manners. Not even Mr. Bennett's native admission in his curtain speeches that "Jarnegan" is merely a good sermon for young and old, has made us forget that also it contrives to build up an exceedingly lively entertainment, worth the attention of anyone who looks for spice in his drama.

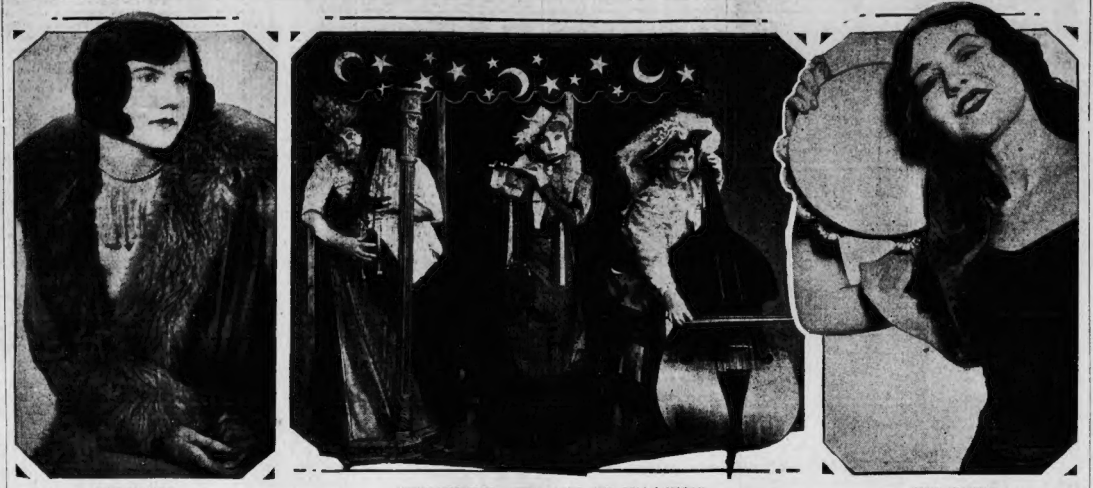
WE have no dispute with Mr. Bennett on the qualities of his sermon. But he does give Hollywood a rather sound drubbing. He flays it with an art of expression which is purely his own. That is what holds the playgoer to attention and finally sends him away from the Wilbur convinced that, after all, there must be something in these constant rumors of sin rampant and virtue gone astray. A well-shaped story and some excellent acting make the case even more impressive. No doubt there is sin in Hollywood; so, too, are there libidinous spots in Detroit, Scranton and perhaps Long Island City. There is nothing local in the operations of Satan. Authors, however, frequently give the old gentleman a permanent home address right next to your own door.

* * *

MR. BENNETT'S chief concern in "Jarnegan" is to make it a gripping drama of everyday life in a community which the world at large believes its general headquarters for complete depravity. While he will insist, undoubtedly, that the play's message is paramount, we still cling to the idea that its humors, its tragedies and its intriguing human touches are the things which count.

Beauty Hath More Charms Than Music to Soothe the Poet's Savage Breast



EDITH ARNOLD

MISS ARNOLD furnishes valuable aid to Richard Bennett in "Jarnegan," at the Wilbur. For one thing, she helps him "show up" Hollywood.

MARIE DRESSLER, BESSIE LOVE AND POLLY MORAN

OH BOY, what a discord of horrible sounds when Miss Dressler, Miss Love and Miss Moran begin their funny harmony business in "Hollywood Revue," at the Tremont. The trio's trying a phony symphony. Sounds rank enough to be very "modern."

RUTH THOMAS

MISS THOMAS is just one winsome part of the mammoth spectacle, "Here and There," coming to the Boston Opera House, on Monday night.

Knows Acting

IAN EMERY

MR. EMERY is one of Mr. E. E. Clive's new players at the Copley theater.

JUST HAD TO BE ACTOR

SIX generations of stage associations on his father's side dating back to the year 1720, and four on the side of his mother, is the theatrical heritage of Ian Emery, young English actor who appears in the cast of "The Crooked Billet," now playing at the Copley.

With more than 200 years of unbroken stage lineage, it is no wonder that Ian Emery revolted at the attempt of his parents, both players of high repute, to inculcate in him a love for military service.

GREAT FEAST OF TALENT AND FUN

HAVING concluded an engagement of seven weeks in the Atlantic City Auditorium, the hippodromic spectacle, "Here and There," will be exhibited in the Boston Opera House for two weeks, beginning next Monday evening. Starting Tuesday, two performances will be given daily, one in the afternoon and one in the evening.

This great mixture of circus, carnival, vaudeville, ballet, tableau, minstrelsy, musical comedy, athletics and a general festival of merrymaking will be displayed here exactly as it was done in Atlantic City.

Music for "Here and There" is by John Philip Sousa and Raymond Hubbell. Its colossal sets were months in the making. Ten baggage cars are required to transport its effects from city to city. Its great cast travels in two special trains, and one baggage car is set aside for the animal family, consisting of a troupe of trained elephants and a dog and pony act.

Among the well known organizations that are in the dance corps are the Tiller Sunshine Girls, by courtesy of Charles E. Dillingham and the Albertina Rasch Girls, and the Lenore Girls.

Other features are a group of famous clowns, led by Joe Jackson; skating ensemble headed by Katie Schmidt, noted champion of European Ice Ballet, and Kathleen Pope and her partner, Frick; Medinea and Michael, specialty dancers; the Templeton Brothers, James and Mercer, eccentric and acrobatic dancers; Alf Loyal's Dog Circus; Arab Troupe, and other acts of novel and sensation character, a circus elephant act, Dorio Togg.

STUDIO LIGHT LIKE SUN

ONE HUNDRED expert motion picture electricians were required to handle the vast battery of incandescent and "hard carbon lights used in filming the lavish theatrical revue sequences of the all-talking, all-singing, all-dancing picture, 'The Dance of Life,' starring Hal Skelly. An average motion picture set requires 10 or 12 electricians. "The Dance of Life" is now playing at the Uptown and Olympia. The lighting was in charge of Earl Miller, head of Paramount's electrical department. About 17,500 amperes of electrical energy were consumed. Four portable generators augmented the power available from the studio power house.

Hal Skelly

Edmund Breese

Man Who Supervised "Broadway" Just 21

The man who "bossed" the making of Universal's $1,500,000 screen play "Broadway," is just 25-years-old. In fact his twenty-first birthday was celebrated about the time of the completion of the picture.

He is Carl Laemmle, Jr., associate producer for Universal, and son of the president of the Universal Pictures Corporation. Although he has just reached man's estate, his experiences in the making of pictures dates back to his boyhood. He literally cut his teeth on a film can, and from the time he could toddle, had the big Universal studio lot as his playground.

"Broadway," which comes to the Park, September 16, is hailed as the first million dollar talking picture.

STAGE VET IN FILM ROLE

FEW players, of the present day stage or screen can boast the long and varied experience that belongs to Edmund Breese, who is heard in an important role in Warner Bros.' latest all - talking Vitaphone production, "The Hottentot," now at the Publix Big Five.

For almost forty years Breese has been a leading figure in the theatrical world. Born in Brooklyn, he journeyed to Eureka Springs, Ark., to make his first stage appearance in "My Awful Dad," in which he played the boy.

A year after his debut he was playing leads and portrayed Shylock in "The Merchant of Venice." Going back to New York he appeared under the direction of James O'Neil for four years.

"Vanities" Graduate Star in Gayety Show

Midnight Show for Al Jolson Premiere

The Publix Uptown on Huntington ave., will offer a special midnight performance starting at 11:15 p. m. next Thursday, presenting the premiere showing in New England of Al Jolson in his latest screen success, "Say It With Songs."

SHE TIPTOED HER WAY TO STARDOM

IN a few years Norma Shearer has risen from "the ranks" to stardom. Miss Shearer and John Gilbert give a scene from "Romeo and Juliet, as one of the big features of "The Hollywood Revue," musical extravaganza now at the Tremont. In the same skit they turn from the classical interpretation to a modern jazz tempo, and play it as a "red hot mamma" and a campus sheik might do it.

But for one little thing, Miss Shearer would never have been in motion pictures at all. Leaving Canada, Miss Shearer went to New York intent upon a movie career. She registered at every agency she knew of, but there were but few pictures being made in the East then, and there were many days of disaster and doubt. On the day Miss Shearer decided that if she did not get a "call" for picture work she would give up the idea, she was called for an interview at an agency. Thirty-five girls were selected before Miss Shearer arrived. Entering the room she noted the eagerness of the other girls, and that but one girl remained to be chosen. As the girls lined up, Miss Shearer stood on her tiptoes and smiled coyly.

"You'll do," said the casting director, taking Miss Shearer by the hand. The added height the star gave herself by rising on her toes helped her considerably.

"Flapper Harmony Four" Feature at Casino

So Lola Pierce, star of her own "Flapper Follies," the clever Mutual Circuit entertainment opening in Waldron's Casino on Monday, has a specialty act she terms "The Flapper Harmony Four" that is one of the best of the feminine singing groups on the Herk "Wheel."

Composed of four attractive young women from the chorus ranks, they offer a vocal turn that is not alone thoroughly joyable but demonstrates why coryphees quickly raise themselves from the ensemble to better roles.

Studio "Prop" Finds Niche in Film Cast

Eddie Nugent, screendom's "jack-of-all-trades," who will be seen at Loew's Orpheum the coming week in "Our Modern Maidens," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's sequel to their "Our Dancing Daughters," was a studio "prop" boy until a year or so ago. Nugent was born in New York City, where his father was a stage manager. Completing his education there, where he also appeared in child roles on the stage of his father's theater, he decided to "go west." He worked as a shipping clerk, amateur magician and at various other jobs until he gained access to a studio as a property man.

Looking Ahead

September 17—
"Great Day" at the Colonial.

September 23—
"Animal Crackers" at the Shubert.
Fay Bainter in "Jealousy" at the Plymouth.
"The Black Crook" at the Apollo.

September 30—
"Strange Interlude" at the Hollis.

Almond Eyed

ANNA MAY WONG

DOESN'T LIKE THE DIET

ANITA PAGE, who plays the heroine in William Haines' new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer synchronized picture, "Speedway," coming to Loew's State next week, has her own ideas about what makes a woman attractive.

"Diet and strenuous exercise, the modern trend of women who wish to become beautiful and achieve a slender figure, have resulted in the exact opposite by causing the expressions and healthy glow of youth to vanish because of 'over-emphasis,'" says Miss Page.

FILMWARDS THE WORLD TIDES ON

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

PRINCES do such queer things. By all the rules laid down by Grimm Bros. and Hans Christian Andersen, story-book royalty must be all wet. Imagine the chagrin of Sherlock Holmes when he espies His Niblets in "Cinderella" doing the mystery tale sleuthing on nothing more than a footprint theory.

* * *

COMES now a new prince. He is no royal four-flush, either. With all the glorious trappings that Hollywood can furnish, and with a Cinderella in a dress that is new, and different, he reigns as the lord of the realm of love, in Radio's big picture, "Street Girl," the advent of which marks the change in the new B. F. Keith's policy from vaudeville to photoplays. Incidentally, let it be said that the theater is going into the screen stuff in the right way, with all the latest equipment and with a card of bookings which include some of the best from filmland. For instance, a week from today will come that outspokenly frank picture, "The Cock-Eyed World," starring Victor McLaglen.

TALENTED Betty Compson is a good deal like those storybook princesses. You can never tell what she is going to do next. She will tackle any sort of a role; and she usually scores. Here she is playing a violin, and the press agent informs us that her ability to perform on that instrument when a schoolgirl "launched her on a theatrical career." Anyway, in "Street Girl," she plays in a Little Hungary cafe, and Fate lets the cat out of the bag to the tune of a prince who affords Ivan Lebedeff, that far-heralded "find" of movietown, opportunity to strut in a nice uniform and prove he is no smasher of feminine hearts. Also in the cast will be Jack Oakie and Joseph Cawthorn, and Gus Arnheim and his Cocoanut Grove Ambassadors.

THE rest of the Keith program will be screen shorts. On weekdays the performances will be continuous from 10 a. m., and on Sundays from 3 p. m.

* * *

TOM MEIGHAN, star of the Warner Bros. "The Argyle Case," at the Metropolitan, thinks the American bowie knife has it all over the Zulu assegai, or any other bladed weapon, for frantic someness. During the making of his latest picture, Meighan was required in one scene to slam a door shut. When he did so, there was a rattle of weapons of all kinds, racked overhead. Zing! A silvery flash past his eyes and Tom was registering an expression not at all like anything the script called for.

* * *

"A CLOSE shave!" somebody yelled. And when the actor had investigated, he made the vote unanimous. Upon the floor a big bowie knife, of the type used by the redblooded fighters in pioneer days, stood handle up, its blade partly sunk into the floor. When the knife had been restored to the rack and the scene was again being "shot," Tom closed that same door in gentler fashion.

Tries to Snap Her Out of It

ANN HARDING AND GEORGE IRVING

MISS HARDING is apparently in the dumps about something or other, and Mr. Irving seems to be doing his best to dispel the blues, in "Paris Bound," at the Keith-Albee.

Maybe It's Only a Warning

JOAN CRAWFORD AND ROD LA ROCQUE

"NOW, WILL you be good?" Miss Crawford seems to be saying to Mr. La Rocque in "Our Modern Maidens," at Loew's State. Yet he seems both serious and sincere.

STAGE AND SCREEN

Through Life's Varying Range of Love and Hate Run the Plots in the New Week's Offerings of Photoplays

EDWARD E. HORTON—PATSY RUTH MILLER
IN ONE EAR of the horse and out of the other to Mr. Horton goes what Miss Miller whispers in "The Hottentot," at Publix Big Five.

ANITA PAGE

BETTY COMPSON AND JACK OAKIE
MISS COMPSON doesn't seem to agree with Mr. Oakie that all's well along the Potomac, in this love scene from "Street Girl," at the New B. F. Keith's

LILA LEE
YOU CAN COUNT on Miss Lee to help deepen the mystery in "The Argyle Case," now at the Metropolitan.

RALPH THEADOR AND NANCY CARROLL
PROBABLY Mr. Theador is seeking assurance in Miss Carroll's eyes as to that glass she offers him in "The Dance of Life," at the Uptown and Olympia.

GOLDWYN SIGNS ENGLISH STAR FOR NEW FILM

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 6—Samuel Goldwyn took his pen and paper with him when he went to London a few months ago. A producer on the lookout for talent never can tell when a contract will loom in the offing. That the busy Mr. Goldwyn had occasion to use said pen and paper has just now been made public with the news that Evelyn Laye, famous English musical comedy favorite, has agreed to star in the first musical comedy to be produced on the screen by Sam in association with Florenz Ziegfeld.

* * *

MISS LAYE, a blond of more than ordinary beauty, is to the British theater-going public what Marilyn Miller is to the American musical comedy stage. Her debut in this country will be on the Broadway stage in "Bitter Sweet," a Noel Coward musical comedy. Then along about the first of the year she will arrive in Hollywood to try her luck in a Ziegfeld-Goldwyn musical talkie. And, all denials to the contrary, the Goldwyn company still hints that Rudolph Friml will write the music. Miss Laye will have to wabble her best to equal our own Hollywood girls, who are proving their ability in the talkies every day.

Louella O. Parsons

MORE power to Mary Nolan. She seems to be getting bigger and better roles all the time and trying her darndest to make good on the screen. When a girl tries she ought to have a helping hand, and who is there among us who won't applaud Miss Nolan for her determination to get there. She will be starred in "Ropes," to be directed by Irry Pollard for Universal. "Ropes" is a one-act play, but as it is filmed it will take much more footage, naturally. It will be a very special role. Robert Ellis and possibly Jes Murray will act with her. Amy Murray is another actor who has burned his bridges and started anew.

MERCY on us! We are hearing a lot about Charlie Kaley these days. Funny how these strange young men and women burst across the film horizon and the first thing we know they are fixed in the public eye. Young Kaley, a Los Angeles boy, who became well known in Chicago, was engaged to play the lead in "Lord Byron of Broadway." His performance so pleased the bosses at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer that he was immediately handed another picture. He plays the principal role in "The Song Writer," which Georgia Price wrote and acted in New York, and it's to be produced as soon as "Finis" is added to "Lord Bryon."

Film Futures

"Fast Company," at the Metropolitan, with Evelyn Brent and "Skeets" Gallagher.
"The Cock-Eyed World," at New B. F. Keith's Broadway" at the Park.
SEPTEMBER 16—
Dolores Del Rio in "Evangeline" at Loew's State.
SEPTEMBER 23—
Lon Chaney in "Unholy Night" at Loew's State.

Public demands to know his whereabouts. That is why we have got to tell our readers that Chester Morris is to play opposite Alice White in "Playin' Around." What a contrast between conservative Mr. Morris and the vivacious Miss White, who is so often called "The Clara Bow of First National." Maybe neither girl will like this but anyway that is what they are called.

Another actor who looms into sight at the moment is Huntley Gordon. He is now over at Paramount appearing in "The Children." I haven't seen him for many a day and we miss him because he is one of the most finished actors in the movies.

"Piccadilly" Seen at Modern and Beacon

Piccadilly Circus is no circus at all as Americans understand the word. Piccadilly is an interesting circle in the heart of London's theatrical district. Its name is a modification of the Spanish picaddilces (collars) that the Beaux Brummels of a bygone day wore on their strolls about London town. Hence the Piccadilly or wing collar.

And now Piccadilly comes to the screen in the talking picture of the same name at the Modern and Beacon.

STAGE AND SCREEN

Through Life's Varying Range of Love and Hate Run the Plots in the New Week's Offerings of Photoplays

EDWARD E. HORTON—PATSY RUTH MILLER
IN ONE EAR of the horse and out of the other to Mr. Horton goes what Miss Miller whispers in "The Hottentot," at Public Big Five.

ANITA PAGE

BETTY COMPSON AND JACK OAKIE
MISS COMPSON doesn't seem to agree with Mr. Oakie that silk well along the Potomac, in this love scene from "Street Girl," at the New B. F. Keith's

LILA LEE
YOU CAN COUNT on Miss Lee to help deepen the mystery in "The Argyle Case," now at the Metropolitan.

RALPH THEADOR AND NANCY CARROLL
PROBABLY Mr. Theador is seeking assurance in Miss Carroll's eyes as to that glass she offers him in "The Dance of Life," at the Uptown and Olympia.

GOLDWYN SIGNS ENGLISH STAR FOR NEW FILM

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 6—Samuel Goldwyn took his pen and paper with him when he went to London a few months ago. A producer on the lookout for talent never can tell when a contract will loom in the offing. That the busy Mr. Goldwyn had occasion to use said pen and paper has just now been made public with the news that Evelyn Laye, famous English musical comedy favorite, has agreed to star in the first musical comedy to be produced on the screen by Sam in association with Florenz Ziegfeld.

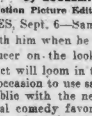
MISS LAYE, a blond of more than ordinary beauty, is to the British theater-going public what Marilyn Miller is to the American musical comedy stage. Her debut in this country will be made in a Goldwyn-Ziegfeld musical talkie. And all denials to the contrary, the Goldwyn company still hints that Rudolph Friml will write the music. Miss Laye will have to wabble her best to equal our own Hollywood girls, who are proving their ability in the talkies every day.



Louella O. Parsons

MORE power to Mary Nolan. She seems to be getting bigger and better roles all the time and trying her darndest to make good on the screen. When a girl tries she ought to have a helping hand, and who is there among us who won't applaud Miss Nolan for her determination to get there. She will be starred in "Ropes," to be directed by Irry Pollard for Universal. "Ropes" is a one-act play, but when it is filmed it will take much more footage, naturally. It will be a very special title. Robert Ellis and probably Mae Murray will act with her. Mae Murray is another actor who has burned his bridges and started anew.

MERCY on us: We are hearing a lot about Charlie Kaley these days. Funny how these strange young men and women burst across the film horizon and the first thing we know they are fixed in the public eye. Young Kaley, a Los Angeles boy, who became well known in Chicago, was engaged to play the lead in "Lord Byron of Broadway." His performance so pleased the bosses at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer that he was immediately handed another picture. He plays the principal role in "The Song Writer," which Georgia Price wrote and acted in New York, and it's to be produced as soon as "Finis" is added "Lord Bryon."

Pictures—Variety

BOWDOIN—Ronald Colman in "Spalding Drummond." Lon Lon Chaney in "Thunder" and Charley Chase comedy, "Snappy Sneeze." Also vaudeville.
GLOBE—Clara Bow in "Dangerous Curves" and "Masquerade" for four days; starting Thursday, Charles Rogers in "Magnolia" and "A Single Man."

Film Futures

"Fast Company," at the Metropolitan, with Evelyn Brent and "Skeets" Gallagher.
SEPTEMBER 14—
"The Cock-Eyed World," at New B. F. Keith's
"Broadway" at the Park.
SEPTEMBER 16—
Dolores Del Rio in "Evangeline" at Loew's State.
SEPTEMBER 23—
Lon Chaney in "Unholy Night" at Loew's State.

Public demands to know his whereabouts. That is why we have got to tell our readers that Chester Morris is to play opposite Alice White in "Playin' Around." What a contrast between conservative Mr. Morris and the vivacious Miss White, who is so often called "The Clara Bow of First National." Maybe neither girl will like this but anyway that is what they are called.

Another actor who looms into sight at the moment is Huntley Gordon. He is now over at Paramount appearing in "The Children." I haven't seen him for many a day and we miss him because he is one of the most finished actors in the movies.

Burlesque Changes

"Piccadilly" Seen at Modern and Beacon

Piccadilly Circus is no circus at all as Americans understand the word. Piccadilly is an interesting circle in the heart of London's theatrical district. Its name is a modification of the Spanish picadilloes (collars) that the Beaux Brummels of a bygone day wore on their afrolls about London town. Hence the Piccadilly or wing collar.

And now Piccadilly comes to the screen in the talking picture of the same name at the Modern and Beacon.

LISTENING IN

By BERT BROCKBANK
Radio Editor

THE greatest array of entertainment ever provided at a radio show is being booked by the management of the Ninth Annual Radio Exposition to be held this year in the Boston Garden and Exposition Hall, beginning Oct 7. Director Sheldon H. Fairbanks announces tonight that neither effort nor money is being spared in the effort to bring to the show this year's outstanding array of the stage and broadcasting field.

Practically all available space in the huge Garden and the adjoining hall has been contracted for by radio manufacturers and dealers in accessories and appliances. This year there will be more exhibitors than in any previous year and the total value of the exhibits will be more than doubled. The RCA exhibit alone will occupy much space and will depict the growth of radio, from the sending of the historic "S" by Marconi many years ago to the latest developed standard. Valued at nearly $1,000,000 this exhibit will come intact in special cars and a corps of workmen will be employed to install it.

A MUSICAL sketch representing the picturesque, romantic and gayety of Quincy Market, New York's favorite amusement resort, will be presented by the Marvin Musicians at 9:30 tonight through WBZ and WBZA. Concert orchestra under the direction of Hugo Mariani, and solos by Lannie Ross, tenor, will be heard in a varied program of light music.

The radio audience will be serenaded with the romantic folk songs of Italy when the Serenata Serenaders appear at WNAC and associated stations of the Columbia system at 7:30 o'clock. In addition to the string orchestra, Joseph DeVita and M. Ciuffo, tenors, and L. Ursini, baritone, will be heard during the broadcast.

A COLLECTION of classical compositions in popular favor half a century ago will be played during the General Electric hour through WEEI, at 9 o'clock. The concert orchestra will be directed by Nathaniel Shilkret in the following program:

French Military March	Saint Saens
Second Suite, from "Peer Gynt"	Grieg
Anitra's Dance
Arabian Dance
Peer Gynt's Homecoming
Solveig's Song
The Accursed Hunter	Franck
Andantino, from "Fourth Symphony"	Tschaikowsky
Slavonic Dance	Dvorak
Flower Maidens' Scene, from "Parsifal"	Wagner
Roses from the South (Waltz)	J. Strauss
Serenade	R. Strauss
March, from "Lenore" Symphon	Raff
Overture to "Prince Igor"	Borodine

The deep rich tones of a voice born and bred in Kentucky will be tuned to the harmonies of the great masters of opera, when Jane Carroll, contralto of the Metropolitan Opera Company, appears as guest soloist in the Atwater Kent hour tomorrow over station WEEI. The song that will won her fame and the opportunity to enter grand opera, Huguette's waltz song from "The Huguenot King," will be one of the features of the program. She will also sing a song of the South and a group of ballads.

MARIE CARRERAS, pianist, who has appeared in concerts in the United States, South America and Europe, will be heard for the second time this season "at the Baldwin." In a program which will be broadcast through WBZ and the NBC network tomorrow evening at 9:45. Her career as a concert artist began at the age of six when she was awarded first prize at the Royal Academy of Santa Cecilia by Franz Liszt. When only 15, she appeared with the Philharmonic Orchestra of Rome with Giovanni Sgambati as her teacher.

She has since appeared with the leading orchestras of Europe and the United States, and was chosen with Paderewski, Busoni and Rosenthal to play in a series of galà concerts with the Philharmonic Orchestra of Warsaw. She was honored by the late Czar Nicholas of Russia to play as the only soloist at the 10th anniversary of Anton Rubenstein's death at Riev.

THE woman who made a concert tour in a wheel chair, rather than disappoint thousands who wished to see and hear her sing has been assigned to a weekly program by the National Broadcasting Company. She is Elsie Baker, one of the best known record and oratorio contraltos in the country. The program is called "Golden Gems," and will be heard each evening at 7:30 through WTAG, Worcester, and associated stations.

Free Haverhill Driver in Maine Auto Death

York, Me. Sept. 7—Charles S. Marston, Jr., of Haverhill, Mass., was acquitted on a charge of manslaughter in connection with the death, Monday, of Edward Fuller in the York Municipal Court.

A second charge of reckless driving was not pressed by County Atty. Ralph W. Hayes. The evidence in court showed that Fuller, after alighting from a team to pick up a glove on the State highway, walked directly in front of the machine operated by Marston.

Veteran "L" Employe Dies

Lewis J. Dickey, 54, veteran Boston Elevated employe, is dead at his home in West Roxbury, following a long illness. His entire service covered nearly 33 years. For the past 26 years he had been receiving cashier in charge of collections.

Carrier Pigeons to Be "Scrapped" by Navy

Washington, Sept. 7—The carrier pigeon is giving way to the march of science. Secretary of the Navy Adams has ordered his use discontinued at all naval shore stations except at the Lakehurst, N. J., naval air station, and at the naval base at Guam.

The order means that approximately 800 pigeons, some of them "war" birds, will be mustered out of the service and sold to the highest bidder.

Opinions Are Impertinent

When applied to modern methods of Merchandising, mere opinions have no basis for existence. They are impertinent and often impudent.

The First Boston Conference on Retail Distribution, sponsored by the Retail Trade Board of the Chamber of Commerce, just brought to a close, discussed the problems of merchandising in the light of irrefutable facts presented by such experts as Paul T. Cherrington, director of research of the J. Walter Thompson Company; E. M. West, marketing counselor; Emerson B. Knight, of Emerson B. Knight, Inc., Indianapolis; Julian Goldman, president Goldman Stores, New York; Joseph H. Appel, John Wanamaker, New York; Edward W. Mitton, Jordan Marsh Company; Thorndike Deland, New York, and Edmund G. Simons, American Foreign Credit Corporation, New York.

Perhaps the most interesting and spectacular facts were those presented by Mr. E. B. Knight, of Emerson B. Knight, Inc., Indianapolis. An indisputable cross section survey of Corporate and Metropolitan Boston was recently completed by this firm. This work necessitated the contacting of 15,129 families and was concerned chiefly with the buying habits and preferences of the responsible women heads of the families in this territory.

The information secured was carefully recorded, analyzed, and put into workable form and is now available to the merchants of Greater Boston who are willing and ready to discard opinions and face facts.

The average retailer sells HIS products by describing their qualities or functions and he has the habit of buying or investing on the same principle. It is natural and obvious that we invest with greater faith in the thing we understand, when and if we understand it to be profitable.

Advertising and advertising media, like any other investment, should be bought on the strength of positive descriptions of their actual values and qualities. This is the one sound method of buying.

The Emerson B. Knight, Inc., with offices at 10 High Street, Boston, Massachusetts, without cost, will gladly furnish any Boston merchant with complete accurate facts dealing with the Boston market.

Little Big Eater
Optimistic Mr. O'Leary

The Master Tactician

A Great Competitor

JACK SHEA KNOWS HIS FUNNY YARNS

Doc Rounds of Uncorn pulls more teeth than most, but he rarely pulls his tee shots. He putts as if the cup was a yawning cavity.

NICK FLATLEY

Little Sammy Fuller, real name unpronounceable, is one of the big eaters of the fight racket. He inhales a bushel of spaghetti for an appetizer. And he's a feather.

Up at Kernwood, Jack Shea is famous as a story teller. He springs a new whimsy on a member, and sells him a patent putter while he's still laughing.

Watch a few rumble seat performances if you don't believe modern youth is absolutely free from crowd-consciousness.

The Retort Courteous

Dr. Marty Spellman, who treats a high priced athlete occasionally, tells of rushing up to a street accident in his medical school days. "How can I get to the morgue?" he asked a busy copper. "Fall dead," was the genial response.

The boys are going in for the colored socks, more violent than ever. They will not catch up to the girls, though, until they go without 'em. The socks, we mean.

Reggie Brown of B. U. has a book of plays written around the new grid rules. Reggie is the wildest tactician and strategist of the lot.

Fred Hoey should get a Carnegie medal for the fun he has handed the shut-ins with his baseball broadcasting. And the gang wants it next year.

Tom Kanaly of the B. A. A. is the perpetual secretary. He sees for at least a dozen different organizations; and does a bangup job for all.

The Officials Are Training

The longest puppies in Boston adorn George Hunt, the assistant sec of the Boston Braves. The largest schnozzel is attached to a well known golf writer.

He's making a cleanup in the market these days, but Bob Fisher, who used to coach Harvard, carries a rule book around in his pocket. The fever never dies.

That sun tan rouge on the frills doesn't look so hot with the new fall scenery.

Record for Enthusiasm

The laurels for enthusiasm go to Burt Whitman, who still roots and gets excited about the Boston ball clubs, after watching 'em lose for 10 long years.

Mrs. George Wightman, mother of five fine children, continues to be one of the great women tennis players. And the most modest.

A couple of damp days mean terrible mortality in the gaudy sport shoes the young men affect. Which is all for the best.

Charlie Chase, coke merchant, shoots par golf every time he sees a smokestack working while he parks on a tee.

Did You Know?

That Francis Ouimet didn't think he'd pass the qualifying round at Pebble Beach.

That his surge into the semifinals, after his spring in the hospital, will go down in golf as one of the high-lights.

Willing Plays Johnston for Golf Title

FINALISTS IN NATIONAL AMATEUR TOURNEY

BETTING ON OUTCOME IS EVEN

PEBBLE BEACH, Sept. 7—Will the successor to Bobby Jones be from the Middle or Far West? Dr. Oscar F. Willing and Harrison R. "Jimmy" Johnston will decide this query today, when they have finished the final round of the United States amateur championship.

Willing and Johnston have met with success in four rounds of match play on the Monterey Peninsula. It is the first time that either Willing or Johnston have been finalists in a national championship.

Willing is anything but impressive to watch in action. He is lacking in style and his awkwardness belies his ability. Few critics possess sufficient amount of optimism to predict Willing as a national champion, especially those who have seen him in action.

WILLING A SLUGGER

He is a slugger pure and simple. But, he is a very deliberate player. One who studies every shot and is with the greatest care. He is easy in trouble, and a fine putter. Still more important, he is imbued with the "killer instinct."

On the other hand, "Jimmy" Johnston is one of the best stylists in golf. He is a long hitter, a great iron player and a keen putter. Johnston should be yards out in front of Willing today in the finals, and the Pacific Coast hope will have his hands full trying to get inside the St. Paul boy with great shots.

Harrison Johnston has few peers in the amateur ranks. He was the amateur champion of Minnesota for six years. He has been the Trans-Mississippi and Western champion, and three years ago at Oakmont ran the field of the United States open ragged for two rounds.

WILLING UNPOPULAR

"Jimmy" Johnston is wholly deserving of a berth in any United States amateur championship. He is in his middle 30's and is fortified with years of experience in championship competition.

Against Willing competitive experience is of vital importance. Willing a deliberateness and actions toward opponents have brought results on the links, but have not added to his popularity.

In fact, the gallery cheered yesterday when Willing missed a putt in his match with Chandler Egan. Willing did not improve his status as a good sportsman last year at Brae Burn in his match with George Voigt.

If Johnston plays golf instead of trying to play Willing, there is little doubt but that the title will rest in St. Paul, Minn., until such a time as Bobby Jones starts out to regain his lost laurels.

The best that can be said of the championship is that it flopped when Bobby Jones was sent to the locker building by Johnny Johnston. The gallery was not as large as some which have followed matches in the east during the qualifying round but it was better than the average.

But as soon as the news broke that Bobby was out, interest sagged until now it is at low ebb. The only chance for a comeback would have been an Egan-Ouimet finals, for this pair of veterans would have been a real attraction and brought out a large gallery.

Pebble Beach, Del Monte, Cal., Sept. 7 (INS)—A windless course, heavy with dew, greeted Dr. Oscar F. Willing of Portland, Ore., and Harrison ("Jimmy") Johnston of St. Paul, Minn., today when they prepared to tee off at 9:30 o'clock this morning (1:30 p. m. Eastern daylight time) for the final round of the 1929 National Amateur Golf Championship.

A right-handed pitcher with plenty of stuff and the control will be opposed by a crafty southpaw in the third game of the Twilight League championship series between Quincy and Roslindale at Fore River Field this afternoon.

Up to the present time, Quincy has faced only right-hand hurlers in this series. With Lefty Shea serving them up today, fans will have an opportunity to judge whether or not Quincy's batsmen are vunerable to southpaw shoots.

Spognardi and Powers have been the outstanding hitters for Roslindale in this series, while Freeman, Jerry Shanahan and McQuinn have been doing the bulk of the swatting for Quincy.

Waltham Protests 3-Year Sport Rule

In a recent meeting Dr. Conrad Bell, a member of the Waltham school board, took a rap at the Massachusetts Headmasters' Association for the ruling which limits the schoolboys to three years of athletic competition.

Bell stated that this matter should rest with the school authorities and suggested a protest. He cited the fact that no member of the coaches' association was admitted at the meeting of the Massachusetts Headmasters' Association held in Boston.

The protest, however, was placed on the table. But Bell intends to see that the protest goes through.

Three Waltham high school football players are lost to the team because of the ruling. Newton high loses its captain and seven other members. Lynn high schools are hardest hit by losing 20.

Steecher to Wrestle Gus Sonnenberg

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 7 (INS)—Joe Stecher and Gus Sonnenberg will meet in a championship wrestling bout here on September 18 Stecher was substituted for Strangler Lewis, who, because of injuries, was not able to meet the champion.

Final Race at Revere Tonight

The curtain will fall on the 1929 bike racing season tonight at the Revere Cycle Track, when Nat Butler stages the Harvest Cup hour race. Seven riders are ready to travel at breakneck speed around the boarded oval in an attempt to better the hour record set last week by Frank Duelberg.

Duelberg, himself will ride tonight, and is out to set the mark at an even 46 miles. At present it stands at 45 miles 4 laps, two laps short of the distance Duelberg will try for.

Gridiron Gleanings

Farmingdale, N. Y., Sept. 7 (INS)—Following a day of the lightest sort of drill, Chick Meehan indicated here today that his New York University football squad would be sent through its second scrimmage of the season Saturday's workouts consisted in the main of signal practice and punting.

Hanover, N. H., Sept. 7 (INS)—Al Marsters, one of the greatest halfbacks in the country two years ago, will in all probability play at quarterback for Dartmouth this year. He has been shifted to the position by Coach Cannell which seems to bear out the prediction that Cannell eventually will develop a four-man running and passing backfield on offense.

West Point, N. Y., Sept 7 Still hindered by the hot weather, Army's large squad of football aspirants have as yet to settle down to serious work. Practice has been confined to physical exercis s and Coach Jones has intimated that no passing work will be attempted un til the weather becomes cooler.

Girl Track Stars in Title Meet Today

By GEORGE W. GRIMM

FOUR of the five New England A. A. A. U. women titleholders will be out this afternoon to defend their New England crowns at the Women's New England A. A. A. U. committee games to be held on the recreation field at Normanbegra Park at 4 o'clock.

Rena MacDonald, national famous all round athlete, and holder of the world's shotput record, will defend her title in the discus throw, while Alice Morris, another member of the Boston Swimming Association, will defend her championship in the baseball throwing competition.

The other pair of defending titleholders will be Margaret Proctor of the Lunenburg A. C. and Katherine Mearls. The latter is a last minute entry, and will be seen in the 100-yard dash, for which event she holds the crown, and Margaret Proctor will attempt to hold her javelin throwing title.

Mildred Wiley, New England high jump champion, and one of the best athletes in the country, is the only one who will not compete in the championship meet in defense of her title.

Nine of the best prospects in the running high jump have sent in their entries, in hopes of attaining the championship, which is being left vacant by the Wollaston girl.

They are Roberta Winton, Lillian Stelfox and Helen Hathaway of the Boston Swimming Association; Enid Larson and Sylvia Broman Phillips of Malden and Helen D Enos and Virginia Blomerth of the Onteora Club also of Malden.

The hundred yard New England championship dash should be a thriller. Olive Hasenfus, Mabel Morrissey, Fanny Mederios, Mae Ritchie, Rose Butler, Janet Hodgkins, Eileen Person, Margaret Johnson and Lillian Sielfox all competing for the Boston Swimming Association, the champion of Rhode Island, Annie Hill, of Providence; Katherine Mearles and Dorothy Mullane and Mary Carew of the Medford Girls' Club are down as starters.

Rena McDonald of the Boston Athletic Association is in a class by herself in the discus throwing contest. She's the defending champion. Mae Magill, Alice Morris Helen O'Neil and Irene Brennan all of the B. A. A., will try to knock Rena's crown off which doesn't seem likely.

Margaret Proctor will defend her title in the javelin throw while Alice Morris has a large field to compete against to hold her record in the baseball tossing competition.

BROWNS PLAY HERE TODAY

Dan Howley and his St. Louis Browns come to Fenway Park this afternoon for the last series with the Red Sox here. It may be the final appearance of Howley as manager of the Browns, too.

However, Weymouth will be there strong to cheer their native miracle man who done wonders with the St. Louis outfit, but who may now be rewarded with a one-way ticket out of St. Louis.

Large Charley Ruffing who has been acting in a pinch hitter role for the Red Sox of late is anxious to return to the mound and he'll get his chance this afternoon against another giant of the slab, Chet Kimsey.

Buffalo Champ A. L. Nine Off for Home With Trophy

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 7 (AP)—Fourteen of the world's happiest youngsters, members of the Burke Bros. team of Buffalo, N. Y., which beat New Orleans, 11 to 4, in the third and deciding game of the American Legion junior world series, were on their way home today with a silver cup and the assurance that they will see every game of the big league World Series this fall.

They will follow the World Series players in a special car attached to the players' special train. Having already won one World Series party as a newspaper prize in the Buffalo city series, the boys were hoping another prize could be arranged.

Capt. Bill Joyce is the hero of the team, which today stands crowned champion of the 350,000 boys, none over 16, who took part in the elimination tournaments that led up to the world series. He pitched the 14th consecutive victory in ending the hopes of the New Orleans lads.

NAT AGARS Brooklyn Wanderers with all their stars, including James Devlin, who recently arrived from England; Steve Smith, Red McMillan and Janoe Nedhadoma will face the Woodsies at Huntington Field, Brookline, today.

Brooklyn in third place is leading the locals by a scant margin and a win for the Woodsies would reverse their positions and also put them within reach of the leaders.

Devlin, who played for Liverpool in England, has participated in all Brooklyn's seven games and, according to reports, is one of the best inside forwards brought over to this country.

With the Liverpool star and Tim Manson flanking Nahadoma on the attack of the visitors, not to mention Bobby Yule, the local defense, which has been playing sterling soccer, will be put to the real test.

In Steve Smith, the Wanderers have one of the best goalies in the league and as he is a big favorite with Hub fans, his work today will be well watched. The Brooklyn goalie has practically beaten the Hub team himself on some of his former visits. With McAdams and Red McMillard at fullback in front of him, the locals will find him just as clever as he ever was.

The Woodsies have won three straight games and Manager Bud Harper will use his strongest line-up in attempting to make it four in a row. The same eleven as defeated Brooklyn last Sunday will trot out today and Scotty Nilsen is in hopes of duplicating his feat of that game, the inside right getting the only two goals scored.

Bob Bethune of Pawtucket will be the referee in charge with Alex Catto and Archie Hart assisting him on the lines.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

The physical hazard in golf is the habit of the different muscles of your body to acquire—often almost instantaneously—wrong golfing habits. Often these bad muscle habits, small in themselves but of disastrous consequence on the ball, once formed will continue through weeks of playing. As an advanced player you have but to understand this phase of your play in order to correct these things, and bring your shots back to true form, when you go "off your game." A typical physical hazard is this: I use a typewriter. In writing a composition I misspell some simple word the first time I use it. In that action my finger muscles acquire a bad habit, so that each time I come to that word I misspell it. That's a physical hazard of writing on a typewriter. The habit will continue until the brain discovers it and corrects it. A small, ordinarily unnoticeable habit—yet every time I use the word the habit makes me hit the wrong letter. Exactly the same muscle, or physical habit, gets into your golf. It forms when you make a certain shot at a certain hole, and continues until that hole is your jinx. You call it psychology. Now you know how much psychology is mixed up in it.

PRES. DAVIDSON SAVES LEAGUE

By CHARLES HOFFMAN

New England League fans do not realize how near the league came to blowing up on Labor Day.

According to the officials of the different teams the crowds dropped off after the holiday, and in order to offset this loss they are reported to have held a meeting and to have agreed to stop the league on Labor Day.

All players are paid until the end of the season in September 8, and [illegible] will for pay checks up to that date.

If the league disbanded on Labor Day all the players would be free agents and the clubs would be breaking contracts and it would probably mean the finish of the league.

When Claude Davidson heard of the plan he is reported to have immediately got in touch with the high moguls of baseball found out the rule on the matter and then made hurried calls to all the clubs and straightened things out so that the season will close at the regular time and save all trouble.

Judge Landis has another difficulty to settle, in the case of Jeb Walsh, Nashua shortstop, who was sold to Detroit. Detroit sent the $4000 agreed to, to Nashua for the sale of the player.

The check has been held up, as there is some money due players on the Salem team, which transferred to Lowell and then to Nashua.

GRAHAM TO BOX MARTIN HERE

Two outstanding challengers for the featherweight throne, now occupied by Andre Routis of France who thus far has refused to defend the crown at weight, will clash at the opening of fall fistic season at the Boston Garden Friday night, September 20.

Bushy Graham, the Utica buzzsaw, will meet Andy Martin of Boston, and it is expected that the bout will prove the biggest magnet ever staged in the city between little men of the ring.

HILLTOPPERS NEED GOOD HALFBACK

OCEAN CITY, N. J., Sept. 7 (AP)—Anyone possessing knowledge of a big, punishing halfback lurking undiscovered among the student body of Georgetown University can earn Lou Little's eternal gratitude by speaking up now before it is too late.

Of the very few things Lou would like for his football team this fall, this unknown back is the most important. Of course, Lou also would be interested in another fast, husky end, but for the time being the job of finding a hammering 200-pounder to lead his squadron of fleet but woefully light ball totters into action has the Georgetown coach more hot and bothered than the blazing sun at this seaside training resort.

With a typically rugged Georgetown schedule ahead, Little would like, for a change, a rugged man, who could smash a path for Hudak, Barabis, Mazzeo, Scalzi, Bozak, Hannegan, all speedsters, but averaging less than 160 pounds in heft. Bud O'Hearn, a youngster, may be the answer to a coach's prayer, but even Bud isn't as large as he might be.

Otherwise the big director of athletics at the Washington university is content with the material. Only four regulars have been graduated from the eleven that beat New York University last fall.

PLAYGROUNDS IN FINAL MEET

The final track and field championships of the City of Boston playground carnival will be held at Franklin Field this afternoon, starting at 2 p. m.

Five senior champions and three juniors will be crowned at the conclusion. There will also be a senior and a junior relay match, with eight men on a team and each one running 110 yards.

There are 24 boys entered in each event, from all the playgrounds over the city of Boston. They won their way to the finals in the district meets held during the month of August.

Jack Sharkey Begins Hard Work at New York Camp

HUB CONTENDER TELLS HOW HE SPENDS TYPICAL DAY IN TRAINING CAMP

By JACK SHARKEY
Contender for World's Heavyweight Title

ORANGEBURG, N. Y., Sept. 7—The strenuous training grind which will fit me for my 15-round battle with Tommy Loughran at the Yankee Stadium on September 26 has gotten under way in earnest.

Jack Sharkey

A month spent in the White Mountains and two weeks in a Boston gym have hardened me to a point where I shall be able to step through the training period at a torrid clip.

My training program is rather simple and one that is followed by most boxers. I begin the day with road work around 7 o'clock. I usually cover five miles through a rough country. This gives me wind and hardens my legs.

I follow this with a light breakfast which consists of fruit, toast and coffee.

I play cards and take things easy around camp until 2 o'clock when I breeze into action in my gym work. Boxing always composes an important part of my training. I usually box six rounds each day with husky sparring partners.

I use four sparring partners each day. Two of them go two rounds each and the other two are seasoned with. By taking on fresh men I get more out of my work. They carry me along at lively clips and sharpen up my judgment of distance.

A boxer requires plenty of sparring in fit him for a big battle. It enables him to call his shots when he sweeps into competition.

In addition to the boxing, I punch the small bag for three rounds, work on the big bag for a round, skip rope and shadow box. I usually work 12 rounds in all.

People have often asked me why a boxer spends so much time on the small bag. In addition to putting sip into his punches, this form of exercise also strengthens his arms.

You will notice that when a boxer is working on a small bag that he always holds his arms high. Then when he boxes, his arms are not apt to tire. He is able, comfortably, to keep his guard up at all times.

If you think it is an easy matter to keep both hands high for three minutes, try it once and find out how much you are mistaken.

I step on the scales following each workout. I regulate the amount of my training for the next day by weight. I usually plan to enter the ring at 192 or 193 pounds. When I get below this notch, I let up in my work.

AT Miami Beach, Fla., last winter I weighed 187½ pounds one day while training for Stribling. I had been on the road in the morning, played 18 holes of golf later and then did my regular boxing and gym work. I didn't realize how easy one can take off weight when working under a Southern sun.

When I found how low my weight was, I took a day off. I spent it eating freely and drinking ale. I find that ale is a great asset for a heavyweight in training. It keeps him from going stale.

The result of plenty of eating and ale was that I put back five pounds. I was more careful in my training after that and scaled 188 pounds when I entered the ring.

WHEN I started boxing, I was fortunate that I knew the late Jack Donovan, famous Harvard coach. He told me to drink ale and never I felt I was down too much. I have followed Donovan's advice with good results.

When I first started boxing after my discharge from the Navy, I tipped 210 pounds. I had never gained properly, but when I got in real condition for my meeting with Floyd Johnson I was at 181 pounds.

Since then I have put on solid weight. I was at 188 when I licked Godfrey and Willis, and since then I have packed on a few more pounds. I now consider 192 to 193 pounds my best fighting notch.

Good Time Guy

By Frank Smiley

MR. BOSTON by JACK CONWAY

"I UNDERSTAND that Andy Callahan, a GOOD fighter, will soon make his bow at the Boston Garden," said Mr. Boston. "Eddie Mack has practically closed for a 10-round tussle between the Lawrence Thunderbolt and Bruce Flowers.

"Callahan first attracted attention when at Miami Beach, Fla., as a member of Jack Sharkey's training camp. He boxed with heavyweights and made the big fellows stagger under the power of his punches.

"The Lawrence youth has won 35 bouts in a row. He got to a stage where the leading lightweights refused to meet him. They didn't care to risk getting knocked out.

"On one occasion Eddie Mack asked 12 of the leading lightweights to come to Boston for a tussle with Callahan. And each answered NO!

"Bruce Flowers has made a habit of tackling all-comers and it isn't likely that he will run to cover when asked to sign for the Callahan match.

"The New Rochelle negro displayed plenty of real fighting form in his recent tussle with Jake Zeramby. He maintains that he would have won by a decisive margin if the bout had not been halted by the foul blow."

"HARRY KELLEY dropped in to say a few words in behalf of Bob Mills, New Hampshire heavyweight champion.

"I intend to try to sign Mills to another meeting with Big Boy Rawson," said Kelley. "I feel Bob can knock Rawson out as he did in their first meeting. In the second round of the recent Rawson Mills bout, Big Boy was out at the bell at the end of the second round. I think a rubber battle should be staged and if it is I'll stake my reputation on Mills' chances of winning."

"TOM McARDLE, matchmaker for the New York Garden," said Mr. Boston, "would like to have Jim Maloney and Ernie Schaaf on the Loughran-Sharkey card on September 26. He feels that if he can pit Maloney against George Hoffman and Schaaf against Ed Huffman some first class opponent that the show will draw $200,000 from New England.

"THE advance sale for the Loughran-Sharkey bout has already passed the $50,000 mark, according to Bill Carey. The Campolo-Scott match, which will be staged by Humbert J. Fugazy at Ebbets Field, has an advance sale of $15,000.

"FOR some reason or other New Yorkers don't get very enthusiastic about bouts billed for Ebbets Field. Fugazy cannot stage his shows at either the Yankee Stadium or Polo Grounds as the New York Garden has both of those places signed up.

"GEORGE V. BROWN tells he has had the Arena all dolled up with some new paint and a few extra trimmings. Col. Bob McKirdy plans to stage a boxing show at the St. Botolph st. playhouse every Monday night.

McCARTHY AND SCHAAF SIGN

Pat McCarthy, Roxbury Adonis, will get his opportunity to crash back among the headliners one week from Monday night, in the opening match of the indoor season, when he will box Ernie Schaaf of Wrentham in a 10-round bout at the Boston Arena.

It was agreed that they will divide the purse which is guaranteed them on a 75-25 basis.

McCarthy has been at Gus Wilson's camp in Orangeburg, N. Y., for the past few days, training lightly in anticipation of the match. When informed over the telephone that the match had been made, he expressed his pleasure.

"I consider Schaaf only a step," said popular Patrick. "The man I want to get into the ring with me is Jim Maloney, and I expect to beat Schaaf decisively and then force Maloney to box me."

Athletics to Play Mattapan Today

The South End Athletics will play the strong Mattapan town team today at 3 o'clock at the Carter Playground Columbus ave. Both of these clubs were leaders in their respective sections of the municipal Twilight League conducted by Bob Quinn this summer.

At 3 o'clock tomorrow at the Dorchester Town Field, the Athletics will play the champions of the New York Banking League.

B. U. BACKFIELD LOOKS GOOD

Although Glen O'Brien and Ralph Marston, first and second string quarterbacks respectively on Boston University's football team last fall, are lost to the team, and, in addition, Cy Perkins, hard hitting fullback, likely to remain on probation, the Terriers should be represented by one of the best balanced backfields in some time.

Jones to Play in Exhibition Match

San Francisco, Sept. 7 (INS)—Bobby Jones, deposed amateur champion, will play an exhibition match here Tuesday, it was learned today. Others to play in the foursome are O. F. Willing, George von Elm and Cyril Tolley.

Sarah Palfrey in Title Match Today

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 7—After pairing with her sister Mianne to win the national junior doubles title for the third time from Miss Helen Marlane of Hollywood, Cal., and Caroline Babcock of Los Angeles, Sarah Palfrey will defend her singles title against Miss Marlowe here today.

Sarah, who has been hailed by both Helen Wills and Bill Tilden as the next American court queen, is favored to defeat the Hollywood girl.

Her play in the doubles match was faultless and although pressed hard in the second set Sarah and her sister always kept the upper hand.

'Gut' Swimmers Honored Today

Max Freedman and Carl Rubin, conquerors of the dangerous stretch of water known as "Shirley Gut" last Sunday, will receive their rewards today. They will be honored in front of the Parkway Hotel, Revere Beach, at 3.30.

Max and Carl will be presented with cups by the mayor of Revere. Members of the Revere American Legion, the fife and drum corps of that organization, and the State commander will be present to pay tribute to the two swimmers.

Quaker Clowns Play Saints Tomorrow

St Mark's H. N. S. will battle the strong Quaker Clowns in the Clowns last game in New England tomorrow afternoon at Wainwright Field.

The comedy boys have played over 50 games before some of the largest crowds and all games against the pick of semipro teams.

TILDEN PICKED IN NATIONALS

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 7—Big Bill Tilden of Philadelphia ruled a favorite to win his seventh national singles title and regain the crown relinquished by Henri Cochet in the national tourney that begins here today.

Turnesa and Kozak Meet in "Met" Final

New York, N. Y., Sept. 1 (INS)—A new metropolitan P. G. A. champion will be crowned today at the end of the double round final at Pomonok Country Club at Flushing, L. I., and the new king will be either Joe Turnesa or Walter Kozak.

"LITTLE CESAR"

The Thrilling, Vivid STORY OF A RACKETEER

by W. R. BURNETT

Tony Loses His Nerve and Is Killed by Rico

What Has Happened Before.

Sam Vettori, Chicago gang leader, outlines a holdup of the Cass Alvadam night club. Joe Massara, Otero, Tony Passa and Rico, Sam's lieutenant, carry it out. In spite of Sam's warning against gunplay, Rico shoots a man when he reaches for his gun. It is Courtney, a captain of detectives. Back at Sam's place, Rico is berated. He retorts by threatening Vettori's leadership, calling him a coward. Supported by the gang, Rico is made leader and the holdup cash is split among them. Tony Passa, after a sleepless night, is fraught with fear of hanging Sam and Rico are warned by the "Big Boy," who has influence, that he can't help them when murder is involved. Word comes that Tony has lost his nerve. Rico threatens to kill him.

Now Go On With the Story.

CHAPTER 10

TONY had always been of a rather easy-going nature and took things as they came. His emotions, it is true, were very unstable; with him anger was almost immediately followed by a grin, and depression lasted only long enough for him to recognize that he had felt such an emotion. He had never experienced the loneliness which is the result of continued despair. Now he felt it and it was too much for him. He looked back on the past as a sort of fabulous period when he had had peace of mind.

He could enjoy nothing. The fear of arrest and hanging dogged him even at the movies, formerly his chief pleasure, and in the company of Midge, his woman, he was so preoccupied that she thought he had a rival and treated him accordly. Even the presence of his mother, who had begun to realize that something was wrong, did not tranquilize him. He drank, played pool, rode about in an automobile, but fear pursued him and he could find no rest.

Then he began to have attacks of acute indigestion, and it got so bad that the very sight of food was repugnant to him. He lost weight rapidly.

There was nothing he could do. He could not find one avenue of escape. But little by little the thought of Father McConaghy took possession of him. Tony was too unintelligent to know that what he needed most of all was someone in whom he could unburden himself to. But he blundered toward that solution.

Blackie's solicitude helped some. Blackie came to see him every night; and once, when Tony's indigestion had been worse than usual, he had even gone for the doctor.

Tony's mother put her hand on his shoulder.

"Antonio," she said, "I think I'll go over across the street and see Mrs. Mangia. She is having a new baby. Only think!" That will be twelve."

Tony tried to smile.

"Twelve!" said Tony's mother, shaking her head slowly from side to side, "and one is too much."

"A bad egg like me is."

"You ain't a bad egg, Antonio," said his mother, "you are only late."

Tony said nothing.

"All right," said Tony.

Tony's mother went out. As soon as the door was shut, Tony wished that she hadn't gone. He was afraid. At the sound of footsteps in the corridor, he felt a hair rise and break of sweat stood out on his forehead. He got to his feet and began to walk up and down. A fury seized him; he cursed Rico and Vettori aloud. Then suddenly the anger left him and the fear returned.

WARNED--BUT TONY IS HEEDLESS

"Me, I'm going down to St. Dominick's and see Fr. McConagha." "What," cried Blackie, leaping up in alarm. "Tony, my God, you no tell him nothing."

Blackie put his head in the door.

"How you feel, Tony?" he asked.

"Hello, Blackie," said Tony, "come on in and have a smoke."

Blackie took a cigare from the fancy metal box with one arm. While he smoked he kept glancing at Tony.

"Whatsa mat, Tony?" said Blackie. "You ain't look so good."

"Blackie," he cried, "I can't stand it. They'll get us sure. Have you seen tonight's paper?"

Blackie shrugged.

"I can no read."

"It's all up with us," said Tony in "My God, I don't see how Rico stands it."

"Rico no scared."

"Well, he ought to be. He's the one that done it."

Blackie shrugged.

"No can help. What-you-say, Certeni pull a gat. No can help

Tony got very pale all of a sudden. He had an automobile stop in the street below. He ran to the window and looked down, then he turned and came back.

"I thought it was the cops," he said.

"Look," said Blackie, "you no better be sick. Listen, you no got your nerve. Rico say so. Sam say so. That is good. Be a man, Rico say You no better be sick."

"The hell with Rico," said Tony Blackie shrugged.

Tony stood in the middle of the room for a minute or two looking at the floor, then, suddenly making up his mind, he went over to the darkest and got his hat.

"Where you go?" asked Blackie. Tony hesitated

"I go too," said Blackie

"No, you go home," said Tony, then looking steadily at Blackie he said: "Me, I'm going down to St. Dominick's and see Father McConaghe."

"What," cried Blackie, leaping up in alarm, "Tony, my God, you no tell him nothing."

"I got to," cried Tony vehemently.

Blackie took hold of Tony's arm "Tony, my boy, don't go. Listen, Tony you no sick. Be a man Hear what I tell you. You no live, see, you no live. Be a man."

Tony pushed him away

"You go home, Blackie."

Tony went out. Blackie heard him walking slowly down the corridor. When he could no longer hear his footsteps, he leapt to his feet, opened a back window went down the fire escape and took a short cut through the alley. He knocked at the back door of the Palermo, and Carrilo let him in.

Vettori stared at Rico, who said nothing

"Crazy," Crazy" said Blackie "I tell him, he a man, he a man But he say, I got to, I got to."

Rico hastily put on his overcoat, "Well, I guess that's it," said Sam Vettori

"Yeah" said Rico, "that's it Now you scare' f a car, Sam, and let's go. We ain't got any time to waste"

Vettori rubbed both hands over his face.

"Not me," he said

Rico looked at him

"Take Blackie," said Vettori

"Blackie's no good," said Rico

"No," said Blackie, "I no good."

Carillo put his head in the door.

"Reiley's downstairs, boss."

"Take Carillo," said Vettori

Carillo stared at them suspiciously. Rico leapt across the room and grabbed him by the arm

"Listen, Sal, can you drive a car?"

"Sure."

"Will you let her out when I order you?"

"All right, let's go."

"Take that black roadster Carillo," said Vettori, "but for God's sake don't smash it up."

Carillo ran out leaving the door open Rico walked over and closed the door, then he said

Sam, you ain't got any more nerves than Tony. Now listen, get down there and talk turkey to Reiley Get that! By God, I guess I got to boss this job myself."

Vettori looked at Rico with hauge But he said

"Goodbye Tony"

Carillo was waiting with the black roadster, in the alley way.

Rico jumped in and the roadster leaped away Carillo took a turn on two wheels

"It's a pinch he went the shortest cut," said Rico

Sure" said Carillo, "I know what I'm doing "

All right," said Rico, 'do it."

The wind had risen and it began to snow, big, heavy flakes which sailed past the street lights. In a few minutes the ground was covered

Carillo took the shortest cut and Rico, holding his big automatic on the seat beside him, sat straining his eyes. But there was no sign of Tony

"If we miss him I'll kick hell out of Blackie" said Rico

"Keep your shirt on, boss," said Carillo

The tall spires of St Dominick's rose before them at the end of the block. The street was deserted. Carillo drove slowly now, hugging the curb. In a moment he pointed

"There's a guy "

Rico leaned forward.

"Take it easy, Bat," he said, "I think it's Tony."

Carillo throttled down to five miles an hour. The man, a dim black figure in the falling snow, stopped in front of the cathedral and looked up. When the automobile came abreast of him he turned

"Tony" called Rico

"Yeah, came Tony's voice, "Who is it"

"All right now, Bat," said Rico, "let her out"

"Take Carillo," said Vettori

Carillo stared at them suspiciously. Rico leapt across the room and grabbed him by the arm

"Listen, Sal, can you drive a car?"

"Sure."

"Will you let her out when I order you?"

"Sure."

"All right, let's go."

"Take that black roadster Carillo," said Vettori, "but for God's sake don't smash it up."

Carillo ran out leaving the door open Rico walked over and closed the door, then he said

Sam, you ain't got any more nerves than Tony. Now listen, get down there and talk turkey to Reiley Get that! By God, I guess I got to boss this job myself."

Vettori looked at Rico with hauge But he said

"All right, Rico, you're the boss now."

"Goodbye Tony"

Carillo was waiting with the black roadster, in the alley way.

Rico jumped in and the roadster leaped away Carillo took a turn on two wheels

"It's a pinch he went the shortest cut," said Rico

Sure" said Carillo, "I know what I'm doing "

All right," said Rico, 'do it."

The wind had risen and it began to snow, big, heavy flakes which sailed past the street lights. In a few minutes the ground was covered

Carillo took the shortest cut and Rico, holding his big automatic on the seat beside him, sat straining his eyes. But there was no sign of Tony

"If we miss him I'll kick hell out of Blackie" said Rico

"Keep your shirt on, boss," said Carillo

The tall spires of St Dominick's rose before them at the end of the block. The street was deserted. Carillo drove slowly now, hugging the curb. In a moment he pointed

"There's a guy "

Rico leaned forward.

"Take it easy, Bat," he said, "I think it's Tony."

Carillo throttled down to five miles an hour. The man, a dim black figure in the falling snow, stopped in front of the cathedral and looked up. When the automobile came abreast of him he turned

"Tony" called Rico

"Yeah, came Tony's voice, "Who is it"

Rico fired A long spurt of flame shot out of the darkness. Rico emptied his gun. Tony fell without a sound.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE:

Ann Marie Macy, young and pretty, is the eager mark for the motherless family. She is forever waiting on her more modern, flapperish sisters, Alice and Jane, and lending them her clothes and trinkets. Neal Forsythe arrives to visit the wealthy Lawlers. Ann Marie quickly loses her heart to him in spite of her disillusionment when he fares coldly among Leota Ingram, the town's bad girl. Howard, her brother, is in trouble with Leota. Ann Marie, in a pact, lent her last money to Leota to leave for New York. It is money saved for an art course. Leota writes a letter to Florence Lawler that brings about Howard's discharge from her father's store. Howard leaves for the West and Ann Marie raises the money for his expenses. Marie meets Neal Forsythe. That night, with John Lawler, he comes to take out Ann Marie and Alice. Ann Marie, for the first time, is jealous of Alice's desire to win Neal Forsythe. Stopping at the Lawlers', the Macy girls are startled by Mrs. Lawler's blunt request that John give up "these people."

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER 18

"I THINK that's a very sensible idea of yours, Ann Marie," Mrs. Lawler said, "very sensible, indeed!—If John hasn't sense enough to give up his night-time friends the best thing that can happen to him is to have his night-time friends give him up."

It put her and Alice into the same category as those people as night club queens and cheap roadhouse flappers. . . . . It all but put them into the class of the Leota Ingrams

Then she raised her chin proudly and pulled her shabby velvet coat tight around her

"Come along, Alice," she said, and walked out of the room.

The roadster stood in the driveway. But she did not get into it. . . . Not for worlds would she ever touch anything that belonged to the Lawlers again. She was so glad she lived! She was through with them all forever and forever!

Crying softly to herself, she went down through the darkness of the street. There were lights in the windows of the big, handsome houses that lined it The houses of wealthy people who had always been friends of the Macy family.

"But they'll all probably drop us now—now that the Lawlers have!" Ann thought and she did not care.

She was going to get out of this snobbish little town where you weren't anybody unless you happened to be rich and powerful or friendly with those who had riches and power! . . . She was going to get together enough money to go to New York and learn to paint pictures and sell them!

That was what mattered most to her anyway—New York and art school—and Neal

Neal. Why hadn't he followed her out of the Lawlers' house? Surely any man who had invited a girl to spend an evening with him should have seen that she reached home safely! That would have been not only the gentlemanly thing to do, but the only manly thing to do!

It was Johnny's roadster.

He leaped out of it and came running across to her.

"What's the matter with you? Hiking out in the dark alone like this! —Come on, jump into the car and I'll take you home if that's where you want to go—"And he caught her hands in his.

Ann Marie shook her head

"I'm going to walk," she said in a strangled whisper

"Oh, don't be a sap!" It was Alice's voice coming from the roadster. Not her company-voice, but her real, breezy family-voice. "Come and get into this bus, and stop acting like a fool'—Just because Jeannva's mother gets sore at all of us on account of Howdy is no reason why you should take it out on poor Johnny. It isn't HIS fault that his mother's a darned old fish wife"

Silence from Johnny

"Come on!" shouted Alice

Come on," repeated Johnny, still holding Ann Marie by both hands and trying to draw her toward the curb. "No use acting like a bear with a sore head, you know"

And, easily persuaded as she always was, Ann Marie suddenly gave up the fight She climbed into the car without another word.

But Alice talked enough for the two of them.

All the way home she talked in a high and bitter voice . . . She called Johnny's mother everything that she could lay her tongue to She called her everything but a lady in fact

"I've always heard that your mother came from the most common kind of people," Alice finished, "and now I know it! -No one but a woman who was used to back-door parties could have done what she did to Ann Marie and me tonight!—She doesn't deserve to have a son like you—"

"Y-you're such a d-d-darling!" she sobbed brokenly "And I wonder if the ice-ground you walk on

"But I don't know whether I can stand for your imp-pound-ing mother!" wept Alice, and she sounded so pathetic and unhappy that even Ann Marie, who knew her, began to be sorry for her.

The old brown house never had looked so safe and welcoming to Ann Marie She went straight up the stairs to her own room

In the darkness she undressed and got into bed

It seemed to her as if she could not face her own reflection in the toilet glass, after the things that Mrs Lawler had said of her and Alice that night

The last thing she heard as she dropped off into a restless sleep was the sound of Johnny and Alice talking things over downstairs

The next morning Alice came down to breakfast

That of itself, was a wonder for Alice who never went to bed before midnight seldom got up before noon

For what was there for her to get up for? She was a marriage girl! just as some girls are business girls

Her whole job in life was to get herself married to the best way to get someone—in her case, Johnny Lawler—to marry her was to be nice to him with her freshness and beauty.

Jeanie's eyes became as large as butter chips when she saw it there.

"Why you're engaged!" shrieked Jeanie "You're engaged to Johnny Lawler! — aren't you, Alice Macy?"

"I don't know who has a better right to be, crawled Alice "I've worked at it hard enough, heaven knows.—I almost had to propose to him, myself, last night before he got it through his noodle that I was all set to be his blushing bride Wait until his mother hears about it"—She went feel as smart as she did last night, just let me state in passing"

Then she launched into a long and slangy story about the happenings of the night before.

Jeanie and Mrs. Leezy listened to it breathlessly

"And if I was that you was a daughter of mine" Mrs Leezy declared at the end of it, "you would never see Ann Marie any more Alice!

For they don't want you, and they'll never want you; and they'll make it hot for you all th— your life!"

Alice nodded with vigor "I'll make it hot for them! she promised them all. And you kn— I can do it too!— I'll make him so he can't eat every word that she said about me last night, so just write that on your cuff" Mrs. Leezy said.

At lunch time she got dressed and went down town to meet John-ny Lawler

At supper time she came home with a large diamond blazing upon her engagement finger and a bunch of sweet peas fluttering upon her shoulder She wore the satisfied, shy and smiling look of the cat that has just eaten the canary as she went around the house, showing off her ring.

Alice had put it over!

The next morning, while Ann Marie was at the telephone trying to drum up some business for herself, Neal Forsythe came to the house and asked for her.

I don't know whether I want to see him or not," she said to Mrs. Leezy. "The other night at the Lawlers' he wasn't very nice to me—and I'd made up my mind not to have anything to do with any of them any more

But while she was talking, she was smoothing down the unruly waves of her hair and pulling the front of her smock into straight folds

She went down the stairs

On the way she made up her mind not to be easy with him. He had treated her badly, and she was not going to forgive him for it on the spot . . . She hardened her heart against him

He was standing in the bay-window, with his back turned to-ward her. He swung around as she came into the room and their eyes met. An odd little thrill that was like an electric shock went all over Ann Marie's body

"I ought to dislike him for the way he treated me. The thought flashed through her mind. "But I don't because I'm in love with him!"

Silly, she told herself, to be in love with a man like this! — Just because his gray eyes were full of light, and because he had a way of smiling at you that made you go all weak and shaky and happy -Absolutely silly!

"I've come to explain why I couldn't bring you home the other night," he said without a word of greeting "You, I'm my sister's guest, and I didn't want to—Well, I knew that I'd get into her bad books if I left the house with you."

Ann Marie gave him a straight hard look "And so you got into mine, didn't you?" she said. "You didn't mind hurting me did you?"

He did not answer. He stood there, looking at her for a full minute as if he were trying to think out what he ought to say to her.

Then he came across the room to her but both of his hands on her shoulders and pulled her close to him

Ann Marie didn't even try to resist She couldn't with her heart beating like a triphammer against his, and her face lifted to his long hard kisses that bruised her mouth a little and made her thoughts

A Kiss for Corinna

By MAY CHRISTIE

CHAPTER 11

He turned up at the theater tonight. While I did the old vohdoh-dee-oh-ing, he was sitting out front like a moon-struck calf. I can't think why I went with him, for the fellow gives me a pain in the neck."

Corinna stared at her solicitously. "Marie, I thought you had a date with Peter? What's happened?"

"You sweet thing! You don't know the half of what's happened! I thought Old Pete was as reliable as U. S. Steel—those big brown eyes of his like a retriever dog's certainly got me going. I might have known that type all look alike at the take-off! But never mind about Peter just now. Van Tuyl's been making overtures, I guess for some time—he's simply crawling with money."

"So you went to the Blue Lagoon with him?" she repeated slowly.

"Yep. A rum hole. And come to that, Van Tuyl's a rum hound. What do you think, he's got a frick -collarette—kind of a cocktail bar—built into the back of his machine"

Corinna said, a little stab at her heart because of Malvey: "He's a friend of Miss Van Wyck's, and has called for her once or twice at Julian's. Very serious." "Maybe your fingers won't get singed, but it will be a whole lot worse to have your heart burned up."

"You said it!" said Marie tersely, producing a cigarette, putting a light to it, and then puffing out smoke into the air. "Maybe I'm a silk low tonight—I told you I had a kind of a date with Peter." There was a pause before she added: "What d'you know about it—I got a tip recently that he's the father of a couple of kids—yep"—Peter's married!"

Corinna stared incredulously at Marie. With a pitiful attempt at nonchalance, her chum was telling her that Peter — who had been Marie's best beau for these many months—was a married man, and Marie had never known it till this evening .

"Peter! Married! And he never told you, Marie? Oh, what a brute!"

In her silken "teddy," lying on her back on the sofa her knees crossed nonchalantly and blowing smoke into the air from a cigarette, Marie, at the moment, looked like one of the pretty paintings on the advertising posters you see everywhere

But the little hand that held the cigarette was trembling. And between the brave puffs Maries lips trembled as well.

"They're all alike," she said gulping. "If ever you allow yourself to care for any of them, they all make you suffer—like hell!"

Corinna had put down her sewing and was ruefully regarding her chum. "I can't understand it." She spoke helplessly. "He seemed such a dear—so fond of you—so—so attractive."

"That's the very devil of it," Marie twisted her lips into a grimace and wiggled her shoulders restlessly. "That boy just got me crazy. When he looked at me all the whistles blew and the stars came out and I was just kinda floating in ether I tell you, I hadn't an idea what I was yessing myself into."

"You're sure it's true" Whoever told you might have made it up just to upset you," suggested Corinna. "You say half the girls in that show are cats"

"They're feline, right enough," agreed Marie "But I got the news before the show, when I was having a bite of food with Gertie A friend of hers breezed in, and when Gert happened to mention Peter's name, this friend springs her bomb and says she knows him very well.

"Of course Gert's ears were twitching -but it was right enough. It seems he has a home somewhere in the wilds of New Jersey, near where this girl lives The wife and kids are over there

"Gert—who's clever even if she is nosey—got the address out of her, and the girl seems to know the number of the private home She's got a cousin there, it seems, who's a sort of nursery-governess to the two children. After she'd gone, Gert dragged me into a booth and pretended she was the secretary of someone who'd had business with Peter and called up this mysterious wife and asked for Peter at the other end say 'Yes this is Mrs. Peter J. Pattison speaking—my husband's in Pittsburgh for a few days.'

"Then is there, you know He travels a lot, but always has a room at the McAlpin" "Oh Corinna—" and Marie suddenly turned her small, pale face and buried it in the pillows "for 10 cents I'd put my head in the gas oven

Corinna was deeply concerned about her chum Marie—whose head had been that her heart was an impregnable fortress—evidently really loved this man

Marie was crying. Better that way. It would gase her,

But Jack van Tuyl! "Crawling with money." How could such a man—take had often heard Denise Van Wyck speak of him!—fast and dissipated and socially miles above Marie—how could such a man as Jack van Tuyl bring balm to Marie?

That night, worried about her chum, and about her own standing with Malvey Corinna slept badly

In the crowded subway she felt faint from fatigue and from lack of air. The day before her stretched interminably long. At the end of it, would she or would she not see her young man?

At a quarter to 12 Monsieur Julian himself came into the hot beauty parlor. It was something to do with the ingredients of a face cream—which was Monsieur Julian's secret. Corinna said she would be glad to oblige him.

"And you needn't come back till 3, as you have no customers booked until that hour" said the boss kindly. "Stay out in the fresh air. You look tired."

Her business done, she found she wasn't very far from Malvey's office. A great longing came over her to see him. She would call him up and maybe they could have a bite of lunch together.

She went into a public telephone booth and gave the number. She asked for Mr Craig. Someone else answered

Now that someone happened to be the son of the boss, Mortimer Craig himself. "Mr. Craig is engaged he informed her. "My name is Dugan"

Ah, ha! He had seen this girl once with Craig and had been introduced to her. He had not only seen he had admired her.

This little Miss Dugan was different from the damsels that he knew. Not in the least part of Craig's training to forgive him for it on the spot . . . She hardened her heart against him

CAPE CANAL IS ENTITLED TO BETTERMENT

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

Only a short time ago the Cape Cod Canal was conducted by Belmont interests as a private corporation. Such an important waterway was obviously most properly an object of national control. Its importance since being taken over by the government has increased steadily. Frank A. Davis of the maritime department of the Boston Chamber of Commerce is leading a battle at Washington to see that the famous canal does not become the object of national neglect. He and our business men fighting for an immediate survey to determine the proper depth and width for improvements.

Eastern Steamship, mightiest of the world's coastwise fleets, is one of the beneficiaries of the canal that cuts the water distance between Boston and New York as well as other points to the southward. The Cape Cod Canal has proved itself a valuable traffic factor, because the stock market, to a certain extent, is a barometer of business conditions, it is interesting its more than a thousand listed issues.

The total income in the United States for the six months ending September 1 is estimated at 40,384 million dollars, an increase of about one per cent over the same period last year, according to the Brookmire Economic Service, Inc. While sales prospects improved in some sections of the country, notably the southeast where fair to good increases in income from cotton and a resultant purchasing power in some other sections is declining towards the level of a year ago, industrial conditions are ending activity approaching last year's level while in some of the leading agricultural sections farm income will probably be below last year.

In view of the statement made at Wellesley that installment buying is a menace, the following from the current number of the Magazine of Wall Street is of special interest: "More than four and one half billion dollars' worth of merchandise—comforts, luxuries and essentials—is sold on the installment plan annually. It is the head of one of the largest companies engaged in financing installment selling recently stated that there are no more than seventy-five hundredths of one per cent of losses."

Naturally, this is a favorable consideration to many lines which depend largely on installment selling to sustain their sales volumes, but it has perhaps broader significance. For one thing, it goes a long way in dispelling the idea that installment purchasing inculcates extravagance and results in a reckless spending of today's earning power beyond a capacity to pay.

This danger has been stressed by economists and bankers since the inception of time merchandising. Apparently, however, the basic intelligence of the American consumer has not been greatly overrated. With the automobile, furniture, farm equipment and even department store and grocery order sales made on time, it would seem that a loss of less than one per cent demonstrates a very sane individual appraisal of future ability to meet obligations.

"Moreover, the successful payments for this great total of consumer goods also reflects the fundamental prosperity of the country. It shows the practical result of a generally higher earning power, and the liberal purchasing power, which in turn provides the wherewithal for the vast consumption demand that is the backbone of industry.

General Motors, the largest organization of its kind in the world, investigated installment buying years ago at the suggestion of John J. Raskob. Prof Seligman set the stamp of approval on such buying, but cautioned against its unrestricted use. The success of General Motors surely would not have been possible without the introduction of the installment system, whatever any of us personally may think about it.

G. M. Loeb of P. F. Hutton & Co. says: "The excuse for the selling Thursday was a statement by Roger W. Babson, suggesting a collapse in the stock market that would rival the Florida land boom and which would affect leading stocks and cause a decline of from 60 to 80 points in the Dow-Jones barometer. Very curiously, Mr. Babson in his very next sentence himself apparently gives one of the best reasons why this is not apt to happen. He says, in his analysis of the market trend during the past year, the majority of stocks have not followed the leaders. The 40 leaders have shown an average gain of 40 points, whereas 614 of the 1299 stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange have declined in value since the first of the year. There is no particular parallel but the trouble up Florida was that everybody was buying everything and anything at any price.

"Mr. Babson here himself shows that, despite the supposed national craze for stocks, the majority of the list has been declining and nothing but the best has been able to go up. A better way of putting it would be to say that the 40 stocks that advanced did so for good and sufficient reasons and those that declined or did nothing reflect the discrimination and sanity of the stock market."

DOLLAR TRADE VOLUME UP FOR WEEK

The volume of money turnover during the week ended August 31 as reflected in bank exchanges, was considerably higher than in the corresponding period of 1928, according to the weekly statement of the Department of Commerce.

Steel-plant activity showed a further recession but was still considerably above the level of last year.

The output of bituminous coal during the last completed week showed a gain over both the previous week and the same period of a year ago.

Crude-petroleum production reached a new high record during the week by freight-car action into sight were considerably larger than in the corresponding period a year earlier.

Cattle receipts at primary markets were lower than a year ago, while hog receipts showed a gain. The movement of commodities through primary channels, as indicated by freight-car loadings, was substantially greater than in the same period of 1928.

The index number of wholesale prices showed little change from the previous week but was 3 per cent lower than in the same week of last year. Cotton prices continued to rise, being higher also than a year ago.

Iron and steel prices were unchanged from the preceding week but showed a gain over the same week of last year. Bank loans and discounts were considerably larger than a year ago, but showed little change from the preceding week.

Interest rates on both time and call money averaged higher than in either the previous week or the same period a year earlier. The Federal Reserve ratio showed a [illegible] decline from the previous week but was higher than [illegible] year.

Forbes Found the British Burdening Us for Burdens

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, Sept. 7—Impressions gleaned during a tour through the United Kingdom and Europe and from informal mingling with many working - class folks and a number of representative business and financial men:

The occupancy of the seats of government by Labor is causing no uneasiness whatsoever among the great majority of the British people, but it has influenced the sending of a good deal of money by the wealthy for investment in American securities. This unquestionably is one reason why gold has been flowing from London to New York.

B. C. Forbes

The gravest problem in Britain, as in several other European countries, is unemployment.

Mussolini has adopted as a partial solution the spending of government money on public works, especially road-building. Britain has not yet found a remedy for the evil, but the MacDonald government will also resort to heavy expenditures of public money to provide work. The best brains in the Labor Party have been commissioned to concentrate on the task, and it is certain that aggressive measures of one kind or another will be taken. Whether the objective will be attained remains to be seen.

Families of moderate means have to pay more in taxes than in rent. Astonishingly little objection is heard to the Labor Government's planned expenditures. There is almost universal attitude is that, the Conservative Party having failed to cure unemployment, every latitude should be allowed the Labor Government to attempt new methods.

America, as a matter of fact, is being made the popular scapegoat for Britain's burdensome taxes!

"We would have been all right long ago if you hadn't forced us to pay you so much money," declared one middle-class Englishman who, one would have expected, would have had a broader grasp of the situation. "Although we bore the brunt of the war, and carried on while you were holding back and making millions off us, as soon as the war was over we began paying you millions and millions of pounds a year, but nobody was in a hurry to start paying us any of the billions we had supplied them. It has been a shamefully one-sided arrangement—America getting all the best of it and poor old Britain all the worst of it."

"But"—and he snapped his jaws as though he meant business—"we won't stand for it any longer. We don't welch. We are taking our medicine—although it is bitter. We have muddled through before and we will muddle through again."

Britains and other Europeans appear to agree on one thing: that America is the one nation to be feared and the one which most needs to be check-mated industrially and financially. The old attitude of "dollar-chasing and dollar-hunting" is giving way to recognition of the dire necessity for adopting new methods and for the most modernized methods and processes. The expression "We must fight the devil with fire" is often heard.

In Britain unprecedented influence is being employed by all classes, from the Royal family down, to draw the various parts of the British Empire into more intimate economic unity and to foster the purchase only of Empire products.

In the matter of wives having difficulty in finding a suitable pair of shoes. Finally the clerk offered her a different style. When she saw that they were made in America, she tossed them down angrily and flounced indignantly out of the shop for spending British money on American goods!

COPPER'S USE IS DOUBLED SINCE 1921

In a review of the copper situation, Hayden, Stone & Co., who have been closely connected with the copper industry for many years, say in part:

Just prior to the "money squeeze" last March prices of copper stocks were at peak levels, attending, of course, the sharp advance in the price of the red metal to 24 cents per pound. Since that time the price of the metal has motivated to the more economic current level of 18 cents per pound, and accompanying this adjustment the common stocks of representative producers touched their low point late in May. Since then, from that date, while admittedly slow, suggests that the group has shaken off its lethargy.

Copper buying in the second quarter of this year was below normal, in consequence of hurried, hasty and congested buying in the first quarter and the reluctance of consumers to take copper in large volume at 18 cents. Producers have, however, aptly demonstrated their ability to keep the price of the red metal at current levels, a realization that cannot be regarded lightly. Due consideration is given to the advances scored by other commodities in the post-war period. Consumers delayed their buying for some time in the hope of a lower price, and it is typical, rather than the exception, that they find themselves with depleted stocks and confronted with the market in better volume. In brief, the situation is again assuming the aspect of normalcy, and present buying is in good volume for both domestic and foreign account.

In the belief that producers are in strong position to maintain an equitable price structure for an indefinite period is fast becoming recognized, and in this connection it is interesting to note that sales of copper for both domestic and foreign account in the closing week of August, were the largest in any week since last March, when buying was augmented by an advancing price tendency. One of the important features of the copper situation is the relatively small spot copper supply available at the present time. The industry appears well capable of effecting its permanent recovery.

Copper, of course, is steadily finding new application. Taking the broad point of view, it has many physical qualities in addition to its tensile strength and malleability, which give it practically basic with no apparent saturation point in consumption.

The statistical table depicts the growth in consumption of copper in the United States in the past eight years, as estimated by the American Bureau of Metal Statistics:

Year	Tons
1927	980,100
1926	841,450
1925	909,900
1924	810,250
1923	766,000
1922	1,317,700
1921	459,585

BIGGEST YEAR FOR BUSINESS

Johns-Manville Corporation is enjoying by all odds the biggest year in its history. Gross sales will run well over $60,000,000 as compared with just under $48,000,000 last year, the record showing to date.

The company has acquired several small concerns this year, thus not only increasing the scope of its operations but making possible the merchandising of the largest number of asbestos products in its history. Insulating materials are, of course, still the backbone of the business.

Welding together of an organization by the late T. F. Merseles has resulted in very efficient handling of the expanding volume of business. As a result profit-margin on turnover is over 2 per cent greater than last year.

Based on results for the first eight months and assuming a healthy trend for the balance of the year, Johns-Manville is expected to earn, after all charges this year of over $8,000,000. This would spell a balance after preferred dividends of $10 a share for the 750,000 common shares and would compare with $5,589,000, or $8.75 a share in 1928.

Chelsea Exchange Increase Approved

New York, Sept. 7—Directors of Chelsea Exchange Bank have approved plans for an increase in capital stock of the bank from 50,000 shares to 100,000 shares of $25 par value. This increase in capital of 25,000 shares, if approved by stockholders September 25, will be offered to present stockholders at $40 a share, or one share of new stock for each four now held.

Issuance of this stock will increase capital and surplus of Chelsea Exchange from $2,000,000, of which $1,250,000 is capital and $1,000,000 surplus, to $4,600,000, of which $2,500,000 will be capital and $2,100,000 surplus. These amounts together with approximately $850,000 undivided profits will give Chelsea Exchange total capital, surplus and undivided profits of $5,250,000.

POWERFUL group is credited with having accumulated Southern Railway recently on theory it has been selling for out of line with all other high-grade rails.

To All Ministers—

Your church will be opening for the season soon. Do you hope to make this a record year for attendance—and religious service rendered?

A great many believe it their duty to use every available means to promote the religious and social well-being of their communities.

Do your church people know when your church will open? Do you want to extend a welcome to the new people who may come into your neighborhood?

People look to the newspapers when they want to buy merchandise. Let them find, in their newspapers, the religious help they need. Use the mighty circulation of the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser to let the people know where you are and what you are doing.

THE CARDINAL ADDRESSES TEACHERS

His Eminence William Cardinal O'Connell in addressing the teachers of the parochial schools in his diocese this week compared the teaching profession with motherhood.

"I know from my own experience as well as from the authority of others that there is a real delight in that relationship which exists between the growing child and the one who is endeavoring to bring out all that is best in his mind and soul. This is the most touching and tender human relationship that can exist. Nothing can be dearer or holier upon this earth. In fact, it is really the relationship that exists between a mother and her child.

"If a mother could devote all her time and attention to her child and if she had the necessary training and education then it would be the duty of every mother to teach her own child.

"But we know perfectly well that such is not the case. Therefore this right has to be transferred to someone else. The privilege of teaching is a very holy one. It has been so all through the centuries."

Copley Methodist Welcomes Dr. Stidger

Friends of Dr. William L. Stidger will be glad to welcome him back from Germany tomorrow morning when he will resume his preaching at the Copley Methodist Church. He comes with a whole batch full of new experiences from Germany and Berlin, where he attended the international advertising conference as representative of the church advertising section. The title of his sermon is "America for Me." Incidentally he says that Germany knows absolutely nothing about church publicity. The newspapers do not consider church and religion interesting matter for the columns of the daily press, he states. He spoke with pleasure of his new assistant minister Maj. O'Keefe, who is vice-president of the Advertising Clubs.

NEWS-VIEWS OF MODERN HOMES

FINE POINTS OF MODERN HOMES

By BETTY BONNELL

ONE of the most interesting pieces of literature which I have come across is a delightful booklet on new ideas in home decoration published by a leading linoleum manufacturer.

I was particularly impressed with the opening paragraphs which tell the reader that never did women enjoy such unrestricted freedom in expressing their own originality in interior decoration, unhampered by hide-bound rules. "Good taste rules alone," says the booklet, and that statement finds an enthusiastic supporter in myself.

Betty Bonnell

In decorating the home, one of the greatest single elements that is brought into play is the matter of color and here you can find ample opportunity to express your good taste. Each room is a separate problem, of course, but not nearly so difficult as you think, if you approach it from "the bottom up" which naturally means starting with the flooring.

I can't think of any greater fun than figuring out designs and color schemes to select for each floor, with the wealth of entrancing patterns constantly being brought out by the country's linoleum makers.

For instance, there is the breakfast room where you depend so much on color to bring charm and brightness where the day really begins. One of the loveliest linoleum patterns I've seen is made up of six-inch embossed squares in varying shades of red which create a vermillion tone ideal for a breakfast room. Walls should then be a glue-green and the ceiling preferably finished in cream yellow. You can't imagine how perfect this combination is, until you've seen it.

Then there's that sun-room which is really the most "outdoor" spot in the home. A delightful base for this room can be created with a linoleum pattern that offers a soft blending of four colorings, together with embossed mortar lines and crevices that create a clever broken stone effect. It is as if the garden walk were brought right into the room! And there are endless color-schemes in the furniture, walls, ceiling and trim to harmonize with this pattern.

As a matter of fact, there isn't a room in the house where fascinating designs in linoleum flooring can't create a most tasteful effect. Simply follow the rule of Nature, that age-old Interior Decorator who wisely puts her darkest colors closest to the ground and makes them lighter as she approaches the upper branches of the trees, then on to the pale blue of the sky. Thus each room in the same way, so that the darkest shades are in the linoleum and the lightest are in the ceilings.

And just remember that there are no cut-and-dried rules to follow. One of the best methods I know of, is to get small samples of the floor pattern, wall and ceiling colors and put them together right before your eye. In this way you can know in advance just what the room will look like, and how each color in the arrangement will harmonize or balance with the others.

LITERATURE on standard materials and products used in the construction of Modern Homes will be sent to you, if you will check the subjects that interest you and mail to the National Modern Home Bureau, Inc., Real Estate Dept., Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston.

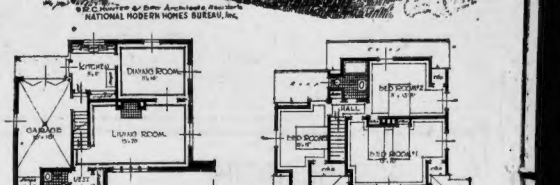
English Cottage Costing $10,900



AN ENGLISH COTTAGE OF INFORMAL CHARM

By National Modern Homes Bureau, Inc.

THIS small home, A184, is complete in all its appointments and possesses character that will stand out among its larger neighbors. In planning this house the architect has, by the handling of the roof lines, succeeded in developing a low, spreading appearance often lacking to a noticeable degree in small houses.

The broad low stone entrance gable with its heavy oak door deeply recessed, created a feeling of stability. The small diamond paned windows snuggling under the eaves and framed in with half timber, add a note of charm to the exterior.

The exterior walls are white stucco and gable ends are siding stained weathered gray. The roof is gray and purple slate laid in irregular courses.

The first floor plan shows an entrance vestibule with coat closet and toilet room adjoining. The living room extends across the front with two groups of windows, open fireplace and stair leading to second floor. The dining room opens from the living room.

There is a kitchen with ample cupboard space and a single car garage, the entrance doors of which are sheltered by a roof as well as the entrance to the kitchen.

Cost about $10,900.

SOVIET RENEWS CHARGES OF TORTURE

Moscow, Sept. 7 (INS)—Renewing its charges that Soviet citizens in China are being subjected to cruelty and torture, the Soviet Foreign Office has verbally requested the German Government to make energetic demands on the Nanking Government to ameliorate the situation.

The request was made through Herr Von Dirksen, German ambassador to Moscow.

The Foreign Office states that unless the alleged cruel practices are stopped immediately, representatives of certain categories of Chinese residing in Russia will be taken.

The Soviet Government has told the German official that Soviet citizens in China have been beheaded, and the headless corpses left lying in the streets, while other citizens have been dragged through the streets in chains.

Families are alleged to have been evicted from their homes and their belongings "pillaged. It is charged that scores of Soviet nationals have disappeared without leaving a trace, and that 2000 are facing lingering death in filthy concentration camps.

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

LARGEST EVENING
CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND

In Maine on Monday

End of the Struggle for the Water-Power of a State

The State of Maine goes to the polls on Monday to decide whether one of Mr. Insull's great power units is to be permitted to export hydro-electric power. For 20 years the sale of Maine power outside the State has been forbidden by the Fernald law.

There will be other questions on Monday's ballot, four of them, in fact, but none has aroused anything like the interest stirred by this one.

The lineup of press and public men is in favor of the Insulls, ably represented in Maine by Mr. Walter S. Wyman of the Central Maine Power Company. With a single conspicuous exception the important newspapers are with him.

The Republican governor, the chairman of the Republican State committee and former Governor Percival P. Baxter—once the valiant leader of the opposition—are on the side of the power company. So, too, are some prominent Democrats. Effective use has been made of Mr. Henry Ford's arraignment of the foes of Power and of Mr. C. H. K. Curtis' observation that the Fernald (no export) law is "childish."

About the only ORGANIZED opposition is that of the Grange, the great farmers' organization. Straw ballots, taken under Grange auspices, suggest that the Wyman-Insull people are in for a drubbing. In some places the "straws" have run 3 to 1 against them; in others, 10 to 1. If these polls were taken with care and intelligence they would tend to show that Maine folk have not forgotten the Federal Trade Commission's revelation of the way the Power Trust makes use of press and school and college for propaganda.

ONE question the farmers and farm wives of Maine have raised is why there should be talk of selling Maine hydro-electric power out of the State when only 23.75 per cent of Maine farms have been electrified.

"Transmission lines to the farms," Walter Wyman answers—for the Insull organization—"would cost from $11,000,000 to $12,000,000, while the revenue which might come from them would not amount to more than $300,000 per year."

The FARM people are not convinced. In the last five years, they say, the State of Maine has experienced an industrial renaissance. THEY are for letting well enough alone.

One public man of more than local reputation and, as has been said, a single important newspaper, have been adamant against the power people and their allies. The man is the young former governor, Ralph O. Brewster; the newspaper, the Evening News, of Portland. Within the past few days, Dr. Gruening of the News has given the people of Maine something to think about by calling attention to the fact that low water has compelled the companies to generate a large part of their power from coal. There IS no "surplus" of hydro-electric, he says.

At this distance it looks as if the Power company must win the election. "Power" speakers have outnumbered the other side ten or twenty to one. THEIR speeches have been circulated. For weeks and months—in one or two cases for years—editors have been hammering away in favor of Export.

If there is any doubt of what is about to happen, as a matter of fact, it is only because of the Grangers and their straw ballots. It is a long time since the Maine farmer fell for a gold brick. It may be that sound common sense prompts him to ask WHY this question must be decided NOW.

The men of Maine may favor taking plenty of time. THEY will lose nothing if a decision is postponed 10 years, or 20. Long before that time they may be able to discern what is now concealed by the woodpile.

Let's Find Out

Just Where Massachusetts Stands on Prohibition

If 15,000 citizens will now sign the petition prepared by members of the Constitutional Liberty League we may all learn the state of public opinion in this Commonwealth with reference to the Prohibition Amendment.

That, in a few words, is the significance of the columns which are being printed on the subject of the "Baby Volstead" law.

The Baby Volstead law is the State Enforcement act. Its repeal by a thumping big majority will be such a message to lawmakers, politicians, professional reformers, paid snoopers and honest but misguided prohibitionists as cannot be denied.

With 15,000 signatures, the petition goes before the Legislature. Let the Legislature pass the accompanying repeal bill and there will be no more State Enforcement law. Should the Legislature fail or refuse to act, 5000 additional signatures will place the question on the ballot in the State election of 1930.

Who was it said prohibition is "not an issue" in Massachusetts?

Ever Hear of Carboloy?

Try It On Your Sapphire

(Copyright, 1929)

Have you heard of carboloy, marvellously hard "metal" made of tungsten, carbide and cobalt? This new scientific product will do what no natural metal has ever done.

It will cut the toughest steel with ease, and cut the sapphire, hardest natural material next to a diamond.

It costs twice as much as gold now, but will become cheaper.

Everybody's Right

Statistics are convenient. If you are a cynic you can conduct a survey and obtain a bushel of official figures to show you that preachers are naughtier than actors. That is, more preachers get into certain kinds of scrapes than do thespians. Proportionately.

THE KAISER'S "GREAT BATTLESHIP"

Named for the German ruler, it was called "Kaiser." Great things were expected of it.

Little did the Kaiser think that this great fighting ship and the rest of his battle fleet would be interned by the British, then sunk to the bottom of Scapa Flow by patriotic German sailors, determined that Britain should not use the German ships.

Much humiliation for the great fighting ship, first captured, under the terms of the armistice, then sunk, then raised, now being cut up by acetylene torches for old metal, then sent to the Krupp works to be made into ploughs, automobiles or other useful articles.

And the glory of Kaisers.

The man for whom this fighting ship was named is alive, in spite of all threats. England, of course, would not allow the first cousin of King George to be hanged, although Lloyd George and others promised that he SHOULD be hanged.

He is living comfortably in Holland, and the German people, pushing honesty, in the opinion of some, a little too far, allow him to retain his gigantic fortune of more than a hundred millions.

The BAER Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

HENRY FORD bounces out of the safety zone with a traffic rule that would knock the lid off an iron kettle.

Henry says we must choose between booze and flivvers.

Why not compromise and run between them?

We will say one thing for Mr. Ford. He has the courage of his factory output.

If booze comes back, he can visualize his workmen spending their mechanical dividends in the corner saloons. When that time comes Mr. Ford will close his factory.

He made his famous Model T.

But he is not going to help make a Model D. T.

The last abbreviation being the medical version of delirium tremens in third speed forward with gears reversed. It is what makes you see pink, green and purple flivvers touring the ceiling and we are glad that Henry is going to stop making them.

Henry plunges up to his hubs in statements without first investigating the questions. He would be surprised to know that the world choose between booze and motor cars years ago.

The old time rummy could glorify himself in alcohol, wipe off his chin and stagger out on the highway. Crossing the street was a simple matter in those days, for all you had to dodge was horses and wagons in the order named.

Nowadays, you require a clear head to cross a boulevard. Not only a clear head, but sparkling feet.

No drunkard can hope to negotiate an avenue on rubber legs and revolving ankles. He would be knocked off by a truck before he had established three staggers.

Motor cars are keeping we pedestrians sober. If Henry stops making them he may be driving us to drink again.

There is another way Henry can make them. Without tanks.

Our advice to Henry is to keep on making them. And a man will be afraid to drink.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

AS I write, Jackson and O'Brine have completed four hundred hours of endurance flight and are still zooming on.

Those endurance tests—they mean a lot. Not just to the aeroplane industry, nor to the men who make them, nor to the world in which they live. They mean a lot to CIVILIZATION. In a sense they ARE civilization.

Think back. You won't have to think very far. A few thousand years—perhaps a million, and civilization was as yet an unborn dream. Men lived in caves or hovels more clumsy than the nests of birds or dens of beasts. Men lived like animals—fear-ridden animals.

FEAR WAS A LASH OVER EVERY MAN'S LIFE. Always he was trying to escape danger. Caution was his code, rather than courage. Never did he voluntarily seek danger to test his own mettle. Endurance? He endured only as an animal endures, stolidly accepting the pain he could not avoid.

THAT A MAN SHOULD DELIBERATELY COURT DANGER, CHALLENGE DEATH, TO PROVE HIS OWN SUPERIORITY OVER PAIN AND DEATH, THIS IDEAL DID NOT ENTER HIS LOW-ROOFED SKULL.

Then, slowly, like the coming of the dawn, the love of courage, the desire to display courage grew in the minds of men. The love of courage as something infinitely precious and honorable, something that set a man FREE, slowly that concept dawned and grew.

And, as it grew, the shambling thing that had lived like an ape began to live like a man. Began to have pride—began to challenge life and death with that pride.

The ape had developed caution. The man developed courage. The ape had reached toward safety. The man reached toward freedom—freedom from Self, freedom from the Fear and Weakness that harassed and humiliated Self. The ape had retreated into his body. The man tried to rise above his body.

The savage, enduring the long torture of tattooing that he may be admitted into the tribe—Jackson and O'Brine enduring the grilling of over four hundred hours of consecutive flight—they aim toward the same goal. THEY BOTH WOULD PROVE THAT A MAN IS GREATER THAN THE EARTH AND THE BODY WHICH BINDS HIM.

AND BY THEIR COURAGE THEY HAVE LIT IMMORTAL FIRES.

Says Mrs. Solomon

By HELEN ROWLAND

LOTS of girls are starving for romance. Why deny it?

It is difficult for a man to believe that a woman may be "fed up" on attentions and kisses—and, at the same time, starving for love. But, that's exactly the present-day situation.

How can a woman hang any illusions on the flippant, wise-cracking, young wag, who is determined to pattern himself after William Haines, and tries to brighten up her most inspired moments with a jolly quip, or a bit of roguish buffoonery?

There is nothing subtly alluring about a man, who appears to be so full of vitamines, that he's spilling back-flashes and droll sayings every minute of the time. Wise cracking has done to romance what jazz has done to music.

You can't make a Prince Charming out of a man who insists on playing First Clown at every party, and Merry Andrew or Harlequin, from early morn to bye-bye time. Too much "animation" gets on your nerves, and gives you that tired feeling.

But that's the average modern young girl's idea. He would rather be FUNNY, than President! He would rather take castor oil than be caught signing. To be SERIOUS about anything or any woman—is, to him, just being "goo-goo."

There's nothing exciting—nothing to write home about—in being kissed by a man who bursts into a wisecrack, before your lip-rouge is dry on his cheek. Besides, a wisecrack is usually 90 per cent crack and two per cent wisdom; and it's difficult for anybody to be funny and sparkling, every minute, without stepping on somebody's feelings or jabbing somebody's vanity.

Romeo never played to the gallery. He went in stealthily by the back gate, talked in whispers, managed to look eager or melancholy, and never once tried to be "witty" or to startle the girl with his repartee.

The "Peppiness Boys" have spoiled the love-game. That's why the average girl gazes upon the third finger of her left hand, with a hopeless, faraway look in her eyes. That's why she goes to the movies to get a few vicarious thrills—or falls for an older man who had not forgotten that love-making is a serious business. Not to say, a Fine Art.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. M'INTYRE

NEW YORK, Sept. 7—A Park Row cynic recently observed that modern journalism has become merely a stepping stone for good newspapermen into the flowery field of press agency. He has been able to list 500 former reporters and editors who have gone over to exploitation.

While many are attached to hotels, theaters, corporations and such an increasing number are launched "on their own" as free lance members of a growing fraternity. Any number have flittering offices in luxurious office buildings along 5th and Madison eves.

The king pin of the guild perhaps is Ivy Lee, who ballyhoos plutocrassino for the Rockefellers and sundry high powered interests. Mr. Lee has elaborate quarters downtown and an enormous staff. He makes speeches in a cutaway coat and has a daughter recently presented to the Court of St. James's.

There are reputed to be six men in the profession whose incomes range from $50,000 to $150,000 a year. But the average income among lesser members of the fraternity are from $100 to $350 a week. The press agent, suggesting the candy slogan, "Fresh Every Hour," is no more.

He was once a spectacular fellow who sported a checkered suit, a diamond stud and was the proverbial Good Time Charlie along Park Row drink resorts. Today the successful embody a studied dignity and silken voiced manner. Even theatrical press agents shy at "stunt stories."

The new type makes no effort whatever to trick city editors with "planted" yarns. He knows that means his professional demise. Nor does he write flamboyant screeds. Indeed, the best of them rarely write a line. They use the telephone and are courteously received at news desks.

It was long ago discovered circuscy publicity is not only cheap but actually harmful to the person or enterprise exploited. Stage and screen stars as well as public men have been "killed" off by it. The wary publicity man offers only facts that may be easily verified.

A new calling shortly to make a snappy bow may prove a cheering first aid to the chronic wall flower or other shrinking violets. A gentleman whose ready wit won high praise is acquiring a select list of customers to whom he will supply on needed occasions one or two new and late stories, not duplicated, and also a bright and epigrammatic remark to be dropped at the dinner table. He wants 20 men who will pay him a yearly fee of $500 and has already signed up eight.

A fashionable man's tailor—who naturally prefers to remain anonymous—has selected the six best dressed men, according to his notion, in New York. They are Ben Ali Haggin, A. L. Eads, Florenz Ziegfeld, Clifton Webb, Jack Dempsey and Mayor Walker.

An agency has on call about 200 girls acting as escorts to elderly women who attend matinees in New York. Most of them are night workers who have this opportunity of seeing a show free now and then and being paid $2 to boot.

The owner of a newsstand dealing solely in foreign publications tells me the humorous British weekly, Punch, leads all other periodical importations in sales. He further confides people will rarely question the high price he charges for magazines from abroad.

And in an automat—I can dig up more places to ask silly questions—an attendant informs me the leading dish is ham and eggs at all hours of the day and night. He notices city people are giving up coffee and the heavy drinkers of black coffee are from out of town.

Jimmy Durante, the cafe clown with the huge beak, is the town's newest theatrical comic to be hailed by the intelligentsia. His famous snozzle and cockeyed hilarity made him the hit of the early season. They say the California Orange Pickers have made him a grand offer to appear in championship contests — feeling confident he will be able to hang by his nose and pick oranges with both hands.
